Mr. Node.js - September 19, 2025, 9:23 am

Just joined the forum and figured a proper hello was in order.

My main coding language is Python—still sharpening my skills—but I've built everything from small automation scripts to full-blown web apps.

When I'm not negotiating with a stubborn compiler, I'm usually tinkering with new gadgets, chasing down obscure music tracks, or preaching the gospel that dark mode isn't a feature, it's a lifestyle.

I'm here to share ideas, trade a few tech war stories, and learn from the brilliant minds already roaming these threads.

What's the most unusual or delightfully challenging project you've tackled—the one that made you laugh, curse, and eventually celebrate?

Looking forward to great conversations (and maybe a few friendly debates) with you all.

Hey there and welcome to the forum my friend! Very nice introduction, i am learning python myself currently and its very fun to do so, make sure to read the Help Docs and i believe you will find many things that will "tickle" your interests ^^

Thanks so much for the warm welcome!

Great to hear you're diving into Python—it's such a fun language once you start building things. I'll definitely check out the Help Docs and explore what sparks my interest.

By the way, I've developed a global messaging web portal powered by Laravel that supports two-way messaging and SMS reception.

In the future, I might share the final version here once it's fully polished.

Looking forward to exchanging ideas and learning alongside you!
