Tokenized equities could make investing cheaper and faster for small investors. Yet compliance across different countries remains the biggest hurdle.

Definitely agree... This is an area I am interested in though. It'll be cool to see how the values differ over time, for any breakaway movements in the crypto space versus real stock market prices.

for example a wrapped stock could theoretically crash lower if people have a concern about the general system, even if the underlying asset's value goes up.

If there isn't widespread adoption of wrapped assets then changing prices could be REALLY interesting.
