Vitalik slams EU's Chat Control: 'We all deserve privacy and security'

Vitalik Buterin has opposed the EU's proposed Chat Control law, warning it undermines digital privacy and creates surveillance backdoors.

We need a low-fee, fast, high TPS network that is specifically designed for decentralized messaging with open/transparent OR private/encrypted methods that work for all.

I know this is already in the works and many support it, but I think there's a way to handle it in a way that puts the messaging as the main focus, with less attention to the underlying token value.

I like utility > profits for a lot of reasons, and this is the area where crypto seems to always lean towards making money over providing value.
