Nick Szabo joins fray as controversial Bitcoin Core update nears release

Cypherpunk Nick Szabo has posted on X after five years of silence, adding his views to a fierce debate between Bitcoin purists and maximalists.

This is such a dumb/painful argument to see people bicker over.

> The fairest and most consistent responsibility with the decentralized nature of Bitcoin is for the legal responsibility for the data embedded in an OP_RETURN to fall on the signer of the transaction.

Simple. Reasonable. Fair.

This update already had people divided, and now Szabo's input adds even more weight to the debate. It feels like a pivotal moment for Bitcoin's direction.

Simple. Reasonable. Fair.

While I can of course understand the concerns being expressed by those that are against the update, what you said here seems entirely logical to me.

What did you find informative about this?
What was addressed?

Edit: As expected, Tyler has no fuckin idea what hes talking about and hes just spamming.

Nick Szabo speaking up after years shows how serious the Bitcoin Core update debate is. His voice could influence big decisions?
