I don't hate it overall for security & compliance, but I feel like right now countries need to be more flexible to help with widespread adoption. Poland may find that they fall behind in this space and end up with less market share % in key markets...

Quote:Under the legislation, all CASPs — including exchanges, issuers and custody providers, both domestic and foreign — must obtain a license from the KNF to operate in Poland.

Also, it looks like AI wrote this article haha, they use the em dash a bunch. Maybe not though
