Thread: Employee will be late tomorrow?

Aeowulf - October 1, 2025, 6:51 pm

(Oct 1, 2025 06:38 PM)Aeowulf branched='true' Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I had an employee tell me today that they'll be late tomorrow, but not Thursday. They will definitely be on time on Thursday but not tomorrow... That one got me good. ? I'm still not sure if tomorrow is Thursday.

This one is a wild one, but I wanted to put it here because it was just too damn funny (at least to me, I'm tired ok ?).

I have branched this out so hopefully someone will reply telling me the answer to my question, so I have a reminder to come back tomorrow and provide the answer as to what actually happened.

I thought tomorrow was Thursday... but now I am not so sure.

The real question is... will they be late tomorrow? Or not?

I have found I actually save a lot of money by allowing them to come and go as they please, and not paying for time wasted on the fringes of the day. It's wild, but it works. Also helps that its not a customer facing job.

I bet he'll be late both days and then he'll go "I'll definitely be on time on Monday"

Laughing Man - October 2, 2025, 6:58 am

Send them a text, it's THURSDAY you are late!

JoshAllen - October 2, 2025, 8:57 am

I think they are going to be late.

plops - October 2, 2025, 9:01 am

Definitely late I bet. Maybe they are just as confused lol

Laughing Man - October 2, 2025, 9:18 am

I need an update on how this ended.

Nah she was in court, but I didn't know that until she came in 3 hours late. ? Apparently she forgot too until she message me last night, but didn't say why. She thought she had an extra day and it just crept up on her. ?

About 2 hours in I honestly just assumed she wasn't coming in. It was fine, we had enough people. It was just crazy how it all happened. Especially since she got the days so fucked up.
