Hey hey!

What is a random fact that still blows your mind to this day?

For me it would be that colibris can fly backwards. I mean how does that even work?!

Pancreatic cancer can grow silently inside you for decades.. and by the time it finally shows with painless jaundice.. most people have less than a year to live.

Bananas are berries, but strawberries are not.

That always messes with my head.

Quote: When you look at stars in the night sky, you're literally looking back in time.

Some of those stars are thousands or even millions of light-years away — meaning the light hitting your eyes tonight left those stars before humans even existed. Some of the stars you see might not even be there anymore — they could've exploded long ago, but their light is still traveling through space toward us.

The concept of life itself is pretty amazing and mindblowing.

My mind is blown every morning. (That's also the only thing getting blown, as I don't have a girlfriend).
