Thread: Beach Day or Pool Day

Would you rather spend the day at the beach or at the pool, why?

I would prefer to spend the day at the beach, fresh air, sand, cool breeze - its beautiful. vs if you're at the pool, the water can be nasty, it can be tight, and can be in the middle of the city...

Honestly, I'd pick the beach because of the fun activities. Swimming, building sandcastles or just lying under the sun makes it worth it. The kids really love it. The whole atmosphere is unmatched.

Beach ofc , nothing better than sand and sun , with beautiful sea view

There can be positives about pools, but I prefer beaches.

Why?

Most pools use chlorine and I can't take much of it before my eyes are burning red and, if too strong, I get headaches.

The beaches in my area are very nice with sugary white sand that actually squeaks as you walk, and calm surf.

I prefer theme parks over beaches

Ieste - October 5, 2025, 11:02 am

There are lots of activities to do at the beach, so I prefer the beach.

I like both - pool day is more relaxed, cleaner and you can just go and relax by the pool.

On the beach you have to get dirty anyway, even if you don't swim you'll be full of sand by the end of the day

Pool 100%. Fuck the beach.

I am whiter than mayo so when I get that much sunlight like in the beach or in the pool, I get sunburn. So neither for me?

I guess the beach since there's usually good bars on the beach.

DAL-SHA - October 6, 2025, 9:03 am

ofc i prefer the beach

the vibes , the sun , the sand , the waves , the view itself is much much better than pool and if i ever visit the pool , it would be the pool of the gym after an extensive cardio session and it would be part of my workout

Beach is nice to catch the sun, pool is better to have a swim.

Yes!! Beach > pool

fresh air and nice breeze is so much better than a chlorinated pool

Really depends on the beach. Like in Mexico for example, it could be the case where there's a lot of seaweed.

I guess if you're in a resort, just stay at the pool by there

If it is a nice beach like where the water is cool, then beach. I hate when it gets really murky.

I like the beach for sun and sand.

Pools for swimming laps.
