The longest non-stop flight ever: One I fly regularly. Bangkok to London Heathrow. It's a 12 hour flight

Mech - October 6, 2025, 11:37 am

I did some 18-hour flights, from Greece to the US. That includes like 2 short layovers though.

My longest flight lasted 9 and a half hours.

I passed the time with music and sleep.

Mine was about 16 hours I think when I went to Jordan years ago. Thankfully I was still a young teenager and didn't have much a problem

JoshAllen - October 28, 2025, 6:47 am

Only 5. I really hate flying and the idea of flying longer scares me.

Deany - October 28, 2025, 6:47 am

Ain't been on a plane in a minute

Cap - October 28, 2025, 6:53 am

Longest for me was probably about 8 hours. I went from east to west coast in the U.S.

I haven't flown overseas or anything. I can't imagine being on an airplane for more than 10 hours.

Yeah it was pretty much edge to edge for me. It was about 7 hours and 45 minutes.

How the hell did your pilot manage that? Did he circle the globe or something lmao. Aus to Asia is like 10 hours on the higher end.

UK to Japan, I think around 16 hours.
