

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Substitute Teacher Cited After Bringing Cocaine to School, Police Say

The Pact - October 6, 2025, 4:56 am

Substitute Teacher Cited After Bringing Cocaine to School, Police Say.

A 47-year-old substitute teacher at an elementary and middle school in Vermont has been issued a citation after bringing cocaine to the campus.

Police identified the woman as Melissa Martin, a "permanent substitute teacher."

"Martin had admitted to school administration that she had cocaine in her jacket pocket, which was located in the classroom she had been teaching in."

Brittany, a mother whose son was in Martin's classroom, told the station, "He looked visibly shaken and upset and I asked what had happened today and he said that his substitute teacher was clearly on drugs and was acting crazy. Those were his exact words."

<https://people.com/substitute-teacher-receives-citation-after-bringing-cocaine-to-school-police-say-11824412>

Prepper - October 6, 2025, 12:23 pm

Child endangerment, this should not be a simple citation.

The Pact - October 13, 2025, 7:52 am

The incident involving Melissa Martin, a 47-year-old substitute teacher in Vermont, has raised serious concerns about school safety and staff oversight.

Martin was cited for possession of cocaine and reckless endangerment.

She was removed from the classroom, which was empty when police arrived.

The school district has stated that Martin is no longer at the school, and further personnel actions are pending.

One parent, Brittany, shared that her son was visibly shaken:

"He said that his substitute teacher was clearly on drugs and was acting crazy. Those were his exact words."

plops - October 13, 2025, 11:18 am

Ha damn dude. Thats when your addiction is really taking control, you feel the need to do whatever it is at/before work. Shes getting ready to fall into a hole she dug.

Prepper - October 13, 2025, 1:32 pm

All school teachers and staff should be required to do drug tests twice per year chosen at random times by computer, unless suspected by other teachers or school staff then mandatory immediate testing should be done.

I know some will hate this idea and chant about rights, it's too much, blah blah bullshit I do not give a fuck if you are directly working with children you need to be held to a higher standard, as a result you should also be paid more because lets face it teachers don't get paid enough but fuck your feelings when it comes to making sure those around children are not on drugs that potentially puts them in danger.

Omniscient - October 13, 2025, 4:04 pm

Should also lose teaching license.

Lowkey - October 13, 2025, 4:06 pm

Idiot.

Why waste good coke on a classroom setting?

Save it for the afters.

The Pact - October 14, 2025, 4:35 am

Brittany claimed the teacher thought her son was her pet dog. Martin said to him, 'Hey Teddy, why are you off your leash?' and my son was like, what?" It was later revealed that Teddy is the name of Martin's dog.

The superintendent of the Barre Unified Union School District, Joan Canning, said "He did the right thing following her out of the classroom and raising the alarm, and that is part of the curriculum. If you hear something, you're concerned about something, you say something."

<https://www.mirror.co.uk/news/us-news/teacher-thought-pupil-dog-so-36051947>

Hackers - October 14, 2025, 4:38 am

(Oct 14, 2025 04:35 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Brittany claimed the teacher thought her son was her pet dog. Martin said to him, 'Hey Teddy, why are you off your leash?' and my son was like, what?" It was later revealed that Teddy is the name of Martin's dog.

The superintendent of the Barre Unified Union School District, Joan Canning, said "He did the right thing following her out of the classroom and raising the alarm, and that is part of the curriculum. If you hear something, you're concerned about something, you say something."

<https://www.mirror.co.uk/news/us-news/teacher-thought-pupil-dog-so-36051947>

That's nutty

I can't imagine bringing cocaine to work, let alone to a school job, let alone actually using cocaine... while teaching.

The Pact - October 14, 2025, 8:00 am

(Oct 14, 2025 04:38 AM)enki Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That's nutty

I can't imagine bringing cocaine to work, let alone to a school job, let alone actually using cocaine... while teaching.

Cocaine psychosis she thought her student was her dog.

Yin Yang - October 14, 2025, 8:10 am

That's pretty nuts this happened

The Pact - October 14, 2025, 8:35 am

Her nose looks really deformed.

Hackers - October 14, 2025, 8:35 am

(Oct 14, 2025 08:00 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Cocaine psychosis she thought her student was her dog.

yeah, makes sense... It really can fuck with their heads

The Pact - October 14, 2025, 8:37 am

(Oct 14, 2025 08:35 AM)enki Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) yeah, makes sense... It really can fuck with their heads
Apparently I think it's rare? I read online it doesn't usually cause hallucinations.

Hackers - October 14, 2025, 9:10 am

(Oct 14, 2025 08:37 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Apparently I think it's rare? I read online it doesn't usually cause hallucinations.

I may be wrong, but it could be the equivalent of a 'brain fart' where they didn't actually see their dog, but the kids name was their dogs name, and the wires got crossed. This is much more common than full on hallucinating.

The Pact - October 14, 2025, 9:11 am

(Oct 14, 2025 09:10 AM)enki Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I may be wrong, but it could be the equivalent of a 'brain fart' where they didn't actually see their dog, but the kids name was their dogs name, and the wires got crossed. This is much more common than full on hallucinating.

She asked him why he wasn't wearing his leash and I think it was clear the boy was not named Teddy, and the boy's mom found out later that Teddy was her dog's name.