Thread: South park is pure gold

I've watched every South Park episode to this da... literally grew up with it. Back in middle and early high school, it got me through a lot; I'd queue up episodes on my old iPod Video like it was therapy. The classics like ManBearPig, Scott Tenorman, and the World of Warcraft episode were unbeatable.

Honestly, the newer seasons still hit hard; they've evolved with the times but kept that same edge. Do you still watch it, or did you fall off?

I still watch but I'm always a season behind. That way I can binge a bunch of episodes at once instead of having to wait for new ones.

I do agree, South Park is undefeated. The creators don't care what the narrative is, they are going to have fun with it.

The Scott Tenorman episode was nuts. I was just rewatching the clip when Cartman told Scott the plan the other day. It's crazy how over all the years I've liked a different character, the last so many years it's been Randy.

There's a member on here that used to go by Stan Marsh and I hated it because I always called him Stan Darsh in Convo and he never knew what I was talking about.

Honestly I haven't seen this South Park and maybe will check it out this coming weekend.

South Park was cool before 2010. I might chuckle now a bit but it fuckin sucks today.

One time, obviously many years ago, my late husband got the South Park movie out of the video store for him and I to watch together, but my six-year-old and his seven-year-old friend thought he must have got it out for them because it looks like it is for kids.

So, I just thought they were playing together in the lounge and I was busy with the baby, but they'd put that on. ?

I saw the labubu dolls a couple of weeks ago. Watching the latest one, episode 5 now.

South Park is goated.

The episode with polymarket bets was okay. I liked the premise, which it was a little more thought out.

I haven't watched a lot of it. I saw the Chris Hansen parody.

I still watch some episodes.

Mostly the ones that friends recommend.
