Thread: Thoughts on Commercial Robots for Home-Use?

• Enlil Wolf • - October 8, 2025, 9:29 pm

Good day everyone,

As the title reads, what is your take on the future of commercial robots for home use in the next two decades?

Do you see it happening or we go extinct long before that?

Deany - October 8, 2025, 9:33 pm

Yes it would be my first friend ?

First friend? ?

plops - October 8, 2025, 9:42 pm

We will not be extinct.

You have two extremes: It does or doesn't.

I think we all agree, long term ai is humanity and proceeds us.

For now, we live before living has no purpose. Let AI deal with the death of the universe. I am not sure that man could.

Yanix - October 8, 2025, 10:22 pm

I believe it's possible, but affordability will be the main challenge. Robots might start off as luxury items before becoming common in homes. Hopefully, they'll come with a "no rebellion" warranty! ?

So, basically, we transcend and merge with AI where humans essentially becomes a part of this AI? Interesting thought.

I agree, but knowing the greedy corporates, they will dump this into our lives where you're eventually going to be like, not having it is not productive enough. Similar to how AI has now become part of human lives without even people realizing it. So, I can't even begin to fathom, what affordable Robotics would end up doing to our society.

lol, definitely, don't need a Terminator / I-Robot future, we are headed towards a dystopia as it is.

Once robotics becomes affordable, it'll be everywhere before we even blink. It's cool but also kind of spooky. Let's just keep it far from any Terminator vibes!

Yeah, also forgot Detroit Become Human. Robots rise up and demands rights and liberty. No more slaves ?

Yeah, if the price was not ridiculous. I was gonna have it cook for me mostly, it's the number 1 thing I'm bored to do everyday True, Cooking & Cleaning - I think this will be the main reason people would even consider getting these.

RangoWorld - October 9, 2025, 12:52 am

I like the idea. Particularly I think we can have a lot of innovation in kitchen appliances.

That game was ahead of its time, honestly. The whole "robots fighting for rights" idea hits differently now. It's funny but also kinda eerie. We might be closer to that reality than we think!

Yeah, back then AI was nowhere to be seen. And looking at it now, after AI, it's only a matter of years, before we get consumer grade robotics, we already have the simpler ones out doing basic stuff. So, looking back - that reality now feels closer to home. Well, one thing is for sure, if I ever get a robot, I am treating it with love & respect lmao AI's growth has made robotics feel just around the corner. It's wild how close sci-fi is getting to reality. I like your approach though, kindness might save us in the robot era!?

I agree. It doesn't hurt to be kind. If they do end up becoming autonomous eventually, might as well treat them with kindness from the start xD

They will dominate cleaning and cooking.
Humans will become managers of machines.

I agree, standing where we are right now. That's the path we are headed. Humans becoming managers of Robots until they become even more advanced.

No harm in being nice to future robot overlords. It's all fun and games until they start remembering who was rude. I'm definitely voting for kindness from day one!

Correct. If a Robot Apocalypse does happen, we'd be saved or spared, at least.

Commercial equipment generally is higher quality too which is a bonus plops - October 13, 2025, 11:11 am

Yeah id take a robot in my house. It would have swappable hands. For.... functions.

Sam - October 13, 2025, 11:17 am

Reminds me of the game Detroit: Become Human. That will be our future. Although it's probably unlikely the level of advanced ai you see in the game occurs in real life.

HaydenTK8 - October 13, 2025, 2:32 pm

Can't wait to hear about robot getting hacked and doing crazy stuff in the news

Prepper - October 13, 2025, 2:35 pm

Why not, robots don't cheat.

Oh ho ho. I think I get it. But I reckon if robotics get that advanced, there will be 'robots' for just those type of 'functions'. Blade Runner 2049, style maybe.

I know. That was the reason to me thinking about this. But yeah, those levels of AI would take multiple decades. Maybe in the twilight years of our lives.

Haha, that's a given. Media having a field day, 'x' robot from 'x' manufacturer is doing something crazy yet again.

I feel like in a few years everyone will have one

Chorozon - October 16, 2025, 2:06 am

I think Telsa is planning to roll them out in the next 5 years for considerably cheap
Very exciting possibility

Eran - October 16, 2025, 3:41 am

Yeah, no. I'm not trying to get more dependent on technology than I already am.
