People who chew loudly. It's like, I get it, you're hungry, but must you announce it to the whole room?

Yanix - October 9, 2025, 3:54 am

Those people who take forever at the ATM for a tiny withdrawal test my patience, specially when I am on a rush. It's like they're solving a math problem in there. I just want to shout, "It's not that deep!" ?

When people are walking chill in the super market and take their time adding the stuff in bags.

Like, do you really want to spend so much of your time in here? Moooove. xD

I absolutely don't like any kind of invasion of privacy. People don't seem to pay as much attention to it. As I do.

Talking with food in your mouth.

People acting self-righteous about anything.

When someone farts near me

onlineuser | D3RFER - October 9, 2025, 8:32 am

A lot of things get on my nerves.

People eating with their mouths open, talking with food still in their mouths, or people who just can't grasp basic logic.

And every time I take the train, someone decides to pull out the nastiest lunch and eat it right next to me, even though it smells super bad.

Eating on the train is fine, I guess.

But please - think about what you're eating in front of other people.

Oh, and people who are rude to cashiers for absolutely no reason. Like, come on. You can't blame everything on them.

"We are experiencing higher than usual call volumes."

No you're fucking not LIARS. You're always like this because you are too cheap and nasty to give more people jobs, so you prefer to keep your bottom line obscenely fat by making us all wait and wait on the phone.

I was just about to say exactly that. Especially when people are chewing gum with their mouths open and snapping it.

People who drive slow in the fast lane drive me insane.

Move, please.
