Thread: What is the most kindest thing you have done recently?

• Enlil Wolf • - October 11, 2025, 4:47 am

I finally reached 2,000 posts ?

In comparison to others with 10,000+ posts, I am a baby. But hey, slowly crawling through.

Back to the thread. What is the most kindest thing you have done for someone recently?

Yanix - October 11, 2025, 4:56 am

That's awesome, 2,000 posts is a nice milestone to reach! Keep enjoying the journey and posting at your own pace. When it comes to what I've done for others, I like to keep that to myself. I believe real kindness doesn't need to be said out loud.

Well, I have changed the topic slightly otherwise no one will leave a comment.

Maybe the most kindest thing recently.

But yeah, I do agree, sharing what you do out of kindness doesn't need to be said out loud into the world.

Congrats with 2k posts

The kindest thing I did recently is gifted something for family.

RangoWorld - October 11, 2025, 5:56 am

I gave my new earphone to my sibling recently. They love it.

Vectura - October 11, 2025, 7:27 am

Congrats on hitting 2,000 posts! That's a solid milestone ?

Recently, I helped a friend who was going through a tough time by just being there—listening, offering advice, and spending a few hours distracting them with fun stuff. Sometimes showing up is the kindest thing you can do.

sharn - October 11, 2025, 10:17 am

I helped a neighbor carry their stuff upstairs.
My back still hates me.

aj33b9009 - October 11, 2025, 10:59 am

I stayed next to my father in intensive care when he had a stroke.

Thank you so much. That's always a very kind thing, being able to gift someone. I surely hope they loved it.

Aw, that's so nice. Things like this makes me sad I never had a sibling. I hope they cherish it.

Sometimes, that's the biggest and most kindest thing one can do for someone. Just by being "there". I agree, sometimes, showing up is what matters. Especially in today's day and age, where everyone is too busy with their lives.

That's massive kindness ;)

Eran - October 15, 2025, 9:42 am

Being kind to myself and allowing myself to trust the process.

DAL-SHA - October 16, 2025, 11:34 am

Hi there

Gratzz on the 2k milestone , Good luck on your 5k road ..

the most kindest thing i have done recently is something to do with getting bio-medical equipment for some 1 poor in need ?

Tyr - October 16, 2025, 11:35 am

I gave a user a quick like.

If you can't truly be kind to yourself, can you really be kind to others?

Exactly.

RiveR29 - October 21, 2025, 3:23 am

Eh, last sunday me and my friends went to the local amusement park. We went to play the games where you can win a huge bag of treats etc. So me and a friend of mine we both won the "jackpot" prize and ofc there were few kids who got a bit upset but not like crying and yelling upset when they lost. So we decided to give them some of our winnings because it was the last day the park was open before winter season. Oh the glow in their eyes, made us extremely happy.

I'm sure I've done things much more important than this but I paid for a mom and her kids $60 grocery tab when their cards were declining. I only went there to get waffles for $4 and ended up spending $64

The Pact - October 21, 2025, 5:59 am

I tried to abolish illiteracy on Hack Forums. ?

Just kidding.

I don't know if this is exactly kindness but I put hours and weeks of work into giving my father the best memorial service possible honouring his career and commitment to family with a slide show and long detailed eulogy. I hope it was enough. ???

Congrats on the 2k posts!

Yesterday I helped a motorcyclist whose chain had come off in the middle of the road. It had gotten stuck between the plastic cover and a bolt on the wheel.

I pulled over, we struggled with it together, finally got it out and fixed it, and after about half an hour, we went our separate ways.
