

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: The Keyboard Is Dead. Long Live the Conversation.

Stanley - October 16, 2025, 5:05 am

The Keyboard Is Dead. Long Live the Conversation.

Technology is shifting from screens to sound.

<https://hackernoon.com/the-keyboard-is-dead-long-live-the-conversation?source=rss>

Bastille - October 16, 2025, 5:20 am

People don't even know how to write anymore — so why would they need to know how to read? The factory of fools is running full speed; humanity is turning into dependents.

Charlie Sheen - October 16, 2025, 6:03 am

Is there true for others? I don't use my voice for almost any commands or to talk to AI assistants. I have in the past but that was when I did video calls with ChatGPT to have it look at something for me. Its not a regular thing and I'm surprised to hear as many as 50% of searches are voice based. I guess I do know some older people that ask siri a lot of questions.

Aeowulf - October 16, 2025, 6:14 am

I like reading. I process things quicker than listening. I also get impatient with the speed at which voices relay information.

I'll keep my keyboard, thanks.

DAL-SHA - October 16, 2025, 8:31 am i dont support this , cringe ?

Hackers - October 24, 2025, 9:10 am

(Oct 16, 2025 05:05 AM)Stanley Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The Keyboard Is Dead. Long Live the Conversation.

Technology is shifting from screens to sound.

<https://hackernoon.com/the-keyboard-is-dead-long-live-the-conversation?source=rss>

Agreed, this is happening whether we like it or not. Most new kids don't buy trad computers w/ keyboards unless they are gaming or have a specific reason.

There are concerning trends about how many people are graduating with tech-aligned degrees, or finance degrees, or other office job degrees... and they can barely use modern computers.

Chorozone - October 25, 2025, 6:42 am

The voice to text technology has definitely not improved at the rate of AI

Try and learn Cantonese with a AI assistant i dare you

Yin Yang - October 25, 2025, 6:44 am

Nope. I don't use voice

JoshAllen - October 25, 2025, 7:33 am

Quote:However, their capabilities are evolving rapidly. They are no longer passive responders to our commands; they are becoming proactive, predictive, and emotionally aware.

But who even wants this?

Siri has been around since 2011. I like when I ask a question, I get a response back. I don't need or want anything else.

Ieste - October 30, 2025, 4:39 pm

Saying the keyboard is dead is an exaggeration, but talking to AI assistants is definitely more efficient now.