Thread: Why is soundcloud trash?

Rsynced - October 16, 2025, 10:04 am

EDIT: I FIXED IT! Directions are wrong on their own website lmao... Now I try to play a track from MY OWN PROFILE, wow an AD? NICE

So I am trying to remove a repost from some turd lamer switch out repost baiter. (well now I know how he so many view etc)

Not sure why I want to be on some platform that is nothing but a scam, daily I get messages from fraudsters pretending to be recording companies etc, I had some fun with the dude from Sony Records, lmao, but ya what a waste of time...

Ya, I can not do it, it ruined my page :(

<https://soundcloud.com/rsynced>

I ask chatGPT at this point and have decided to leave soundcloud.com for good!

I click repost to remove repost and it made this guys tracks spam my fucking page! WOW I HAVE HAD IT, WTF?

IT'S TRASH! FUCK EM' WASTE OF TIME ?

AI Quote: how do i remove a repost from from profile <https://soundcloud.com/rsynced>

Here's how to remove a repost from your SoundCloud profile (works both on desktop and mobile browser):

? On Desktop (soundcloud.com)

Go to your SoundCloud profile -> <https://soundcloud.com/rsynced>

Scroll to the "All" or "Reposts" tab — this shows tracks you've reposted.

Find the reposted track you want to remove.

Hover your mouse over the "Repost" (?) icon — it should be orange.

Click it once — it will turn gray, meaning the repost is removed.

? The track will immediately disappear from your profile's repost section and stream.

? On Mobile App

Open the SoundCloud app.

Go to your profile -> tap Reposts or scroll down to the reposted track.

Tap the orange repost (?) button again — it turns gray.

? Notes

Removing a repost doesn't delete the original track — it just removes your share of it.

If you don't see the reposted track, check the "All" tab (some tracks may be mixed in with your uploads).

Would you like me to show the exact steps visually (with screenshot-style mockups) for the web or mobile version?

this does not work On Desktop (soundcloud.com), nothing works, why is soundcloud trash? what is a better choice?

Hey — you're not alone in being frustrated with this. Lots of users report SoundCloud being glitchy, support being slow, and repost/remove features being buggy. I dug into what people have found and what alternatives might be better. I can help you pick one that fits you too, if you want.

? What's wrong with SoundCloud (from what people are saying)

Some of the downsides people are citing:

Reposts don't always disappear immediately after you "un-repost". It stays visible sometimes, especially in feeds.

Their support is often described as slow or unhelpful — people complain about requests/tickets taking forever.

Trustpilot

Discovery / algorithm issues: plenty of reposts cluttering feeds, so it's hard to find new content by artists you follow.

Sometimes audio quality is reportedly worse than on other platforms (compression, upload quality, etc.).

So yeah, it's not always "trash", but there are real issues.

? Alternatives to SoundCloud

Depending on what you need (uploading, discovery, paying/earning, community, etc.), some other platforms do parts of what SoundCloud does, sometimes better.

Here are some good ones:

Platform Good for... Trade-offs / what you lose vs SC

Audiomack Emerging artists, free uploads, good exposure, simple creator tools.

Wikipedia

Might have fewer listeners depending on your genre; less premium reach than Spotify/Apple Music; maybe fewer features for detailed analytics.

Bandcamp Direct-to-fan sales, high quality audio, very artist-friendly (merch, etc.). Great for people who want to own their work and sell it.

Techlogitic

Less built-in social/discovery network; fewer listeners just browsing vs streaming-first services; less free streaming unless you set it up that way.

Apple Music / Spotify / Amazon Music / YouTube Music Huge audience reach, polished apps, good discovery tools. More gatekeepers; often more cost or subscription model; you may need a distributor; less "indie-community feel" than SC.

Bandzoogle If you want to build your own website, sell merch, control your brand.

Wikipedia

Doesn't solve discovery as SC does; you'll have to bring in your audience rather than rely on the platform showing your stuff to new people.

Other niche or emerging platforms might be good depending on genre (e.g. for hip-hop, rap, electronic, etc.). Also look for platforms with good audio fidelity if that matters to you.

If you tell me: what features matter most to you (e.g. uploading freely, ability to sell music / monetization, community / discovery, high quality audio, being free vs cheap), I can suggest 2-3 platforms that might suit you best. Do you want me to do that?

It's not all bad, but the ads and random glitches can be annoying.

Soundcloud these days is just full of memes and old trash that is just messed up for someones silly jokes.

Yeah, it's kinda sad honestly. It used to be about discovering new talent, now it's mostly meme edits and random noise.

Finding new talent these days is hard. I have a few tracks on Sound cloud and also youtube and I find youtube to be a better platform for it these days even when its filled with so much but at least youtube manages your content correctly (most of the time)

Yeah, I totally get that. YouTube definitely feels more organized and gives your music a better shot at being seen. SoundCloud just isn't what it used to be.

Just feels like a dumping ground these days for dead memes to me so yeah its gone down hill sadly.

Sad to see happen but I guess soundcloud dont really have to worry as its still making money from ads these days.

MadScientist - October 22, 2025, 8:38 pm

Sounds clouds always been trash, atleast from my perspective only seeing the soundcloud rapper side

True, they're still pulling in ad money, so they probably don't care too much. Kinda sucks though, it used to be such a great spot for real artists.

I am sure sooner or later a new platform will come around and it will ry and remake the old soundcloud vibe and sadly fail after a year or so. Mark my words lol.

Haha yeah, that's usually how it goes. They pop up with big promises, get some hype, then fade out once people lose interest.

Reminds me of that streaming platform that stole my name Mixer or whatever it was called.

Haha yeah, Mixer! That one came and went so fast. Crazy how even with big backing, it just couldn't compete.

I remember hearing a few streamers getting paid millions to move from twitch to it and then it all failed and they still had to pay out for those who signed the contracts. Easy money for them I guess,.

Yeah, for real. Those streamers walked away with crazy paychecks while the platform tanked — definitely a win on their end.

They stole my name anyway so I was gonna sue them in the end. they did the smart thing and may have saw me coming lol.

Haha yeah, they probably caught wind and decided to shut down before you could hit them with that lawsuit!

I did say when it became a thing that I might get a few more subs on youtube and I believe if I go and grab the stats it did increase a little. ?

Haha nice! Guess the algorithm finally decided to show you some love ? even a little boost feels good!

Rsynced - October 24, 2025, 10:07 am

Well I guess I kind of gave up on them when they got rid of public plays and require login now.

Hackers - October 25, 2025, 9:59 am

I don't really use Soundcloud unless a very specific artist uses it. Back in the day it was so helpful and ahead of its time. I feel like it has kind of slipped backwards or maybe just didn't upgrade fast enough... idk maybe I'm wrong

Idk what to say about it, I am not sure where else to go?
