

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Remember when staying up late actually felt special?

jasonust - October 16, 2025, 12:26 pm

Back then, being up past midnight meant you were doing something — gaming with friends, watching random YouTube rabbit holes, or just existing in that weird quiet world when everyone else was asleep.

Now it's 2 AM, you're half-scrolling through nothing, half-thinking about bills, and the only thing glowing is your phone screen and your regrets.

I kinda miss when "late night" felt like freedom instead of insomnia.

Anyone else?

PacketPilot - October 16, 2025, 12:51 pm

[quote="jasonust" pid='62850917' dateline='1760642798'

"Totally. It used to mean movies, stars, or secrets... now it just means bad sleep and regrets."

Yin Yang - October 16, 2025, 12:54 pm

Late night runs to the packy and mcydy's (mcdonalds), those were the days

CryptoMancer - October 16, 2025, 2:37 pm

Yes I remember it was very special

Deany - October 16, 2025, 3:17 pm

Well now I gotta stay up late for Japan time zone

DAL-SHA - October 18, 2025, 11:30 pm

actually , i used to work late at night ..

if im not making money and its not worth staying up night , i just dont stay up late ?

(Oct 16, 2025 03:17 PM)Deany Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well now I gotta stay up late for Japan time zone why though sir if i may ask ?

Pimping - October 19, 2025, 12:05 am

Yeah i feel you same

now a days its insomnia for me too and just browsing HF and the web

sharn - October 19, 2025, 2:33 am

I remember when staying up late meant gaming marathons and junk food.

Sleep used to be optional.

Oh_Well - October 19, 2025, 3:29 am

That's very true.

And the only reason I'm staying up late is to catch up on missed time because all day I was doing other stuff and didn't have time for myself.

I hope the rest of my life isn't that from now on