Thread: Prince Andrew drops Duke of York title as Epstein fallout continues

Palestine - October 17, 2025, 5:22 pm

In a statement from Buckingham Palace, Prince Andrew says he's giving up his Duke of York title and other honors, amid fresh scrutiny of his friendship with the late sex offender Jeffrey Epstein.

Andrew, 65, denies any wrongdoing, but stepped back from royal duties in 2019, over his Epstein links. He was stripped of royal patronages and military titles in 2022.

This week, British media published excerpts of a posthumous memoir by Epstein's best-known accuser, Virginia Giuffre, who says she had sex with the prince when she was 17. Andrew denies that, and settled a lawsuit with Giuffre in 2022. She died by suicide earlier this year.

In a statement issued by the palace late Friday, Andrew says the "continued accusations... distract from the work of His Majesty" King Charles. So after "discussion" with the king and their "wider family," Andrew says he will "no longer use my title or the honours which have been conferred upon me." He added that he "vigorously" denies the accusations against him.

Andrew remains a prince, and is expected to continue living in a royal residence near Windsor Castle. His daughters remain princesses. But his ex-wife Sarah Ferguson will also lose her Duchess of York title.

So many people who were involved with Epstein just seem to casually continue on with their lives as though nothing happened, unreal

Virginia Giuffre didn't kill herself? Like she is the one woman who full on just came out and she ends up dead. I have heard rumours that many of them were fixed up with super wealthy men and luxury lifestyles as a result to not talk and that they don't threaten them but look what happened to her. Hard to believe it was suicide.

Anyway good job at least the prick has FINALLY lost his titles.

Warning to those tempted to be sex offenders, if you have a nice job you are so so much more likely to lose it than you were prior to 2017.

It's been a lot of years. At least it's happening. Wannabe sex offenders need more and more examples of how they may be ruined by it if they choose it.

There's a long history of people not caring. Blaming young teenage girls for what happens. Teenage boys not even having a pathway to fight back. People covering it up for men with any money or power or even just a decent job so they have respect.

The story of how much all kinds of people covered up for Larry Nassar is so disgusting.

Dreading puts out really good content. I'm pretty desensitised and detached by true crime at this point, but this one did actually get anger out of me in places. Quite good if you're washing dishes, cleaning, cooking dinner because you don't really need to watch these videos. You can just listen.

I love watching videos i'm more of a watcher than listener but for something like this i can make an exception, maybe listen to it while driving. I always enjoy true crime too, have you ever watched MrBallen on Youtube or listened to his podcasts? His stories are amazing and very interesting

I've heard he's one of the best before, but I've never added him to my regular watching. I should look into him in between my usuals.

Actually the only Youtubers that I watch absolutely religiously every single episode are Dreading and True Crime Loser who is a comedian.

True Crime Loser mainly just talks to the camera with very little visuals but basically he tells all these stories as comedy making fun of just the criminals and sometimes the weirder police of course he respects the victims. He's such a great story teller and very funny. Scott Sharpe is his real name.

I watch Explore with Us sometimes and Red Thread Interrogations.
