Thread: McDonald's employee shoots customer in the neck.

The Pact - October 18, 2025, 6:30 am

21-year-old Yoan Soto was working an overnight shift at a Florida Davenport McDonald's when two late-night customers became upset about their wait time in the drive-thru line.

Soto apologized to the pair for being "way behind," Judd said, even stating that McDonald's "should think through" how their system works.

Despite his apology, the two allegedly began "threatening" Soto, telling the employee they would wait for his shift to end to physically harm him.

When he finished his shift the two entered the lobby.

They tried to grab his gun and Soto pulled the trigger, and he shot Peter Story 19-years-old in the neck. The other guy was 18.

FAFO is what is happening these days.

Play stupid games and win stupid prizes.

Edit: After reading through the article more; everyone involved in the crime is an idiot.

They obviously deserved it, shouldn't ever threaten another's life especially if you don't know if they're carrying or not.

He told them he finished at 4am.

Imagine forgetting that the USA is full of guns and thinking, "Yay we are 18 and 19 year old dudes we want the fun of beating someone up. He finishes at 4am and wasn't able to ignore all the Uber Eats and DoorDash orders for us, so time to beat him up!" And then get shot in the neck.

He didn't die and was fine by the way. Must be a horrible injury to live with though. At least his literal neck beard is disrupted now.

I've learned from a VERY young age (especially here in Philly) to NEVER doubt somebodys motives or what they're willing to do to harm you, i've always been able to avoid any type of problems by just minding my own business and never engaging with anybody. Most people even the real young ones are armed and its not a surprise anymore.

Scary. Pity it has got like that. I'm sick of experiences of having people misunderstand stuff over bullshit too though. Far too many people in the world continually scanning for insults to themselves that don't even exist to take offense to.

"Oh he disrespected us because we didn't look cool enough, so he made the Uber Eats and Door Dash orders before us, he's disrespecting us." No, moron, his boss told him he couldn't serve you because they were too backed up with Uber Eats and Door Dash."

Mind you it is ridiculous that people who don't even leave their house were getting preference over people who drove out there and were actually there though. ?

It rarely happens here because we don't have a lot of guns. So, when it happens someone usually dying from a beating or something.
