Thread: Steam Wallet Codes

Laughing Man - October 20, 2025, 4:52 pm

I'm looking to get up to 260$ in steam wallet codes, at a discount. I know some people have a way to get them cheaper than face value.

LMK.

A lot of the discounted steam wallet codes are usually for other countries, the best way to get discounted stuff on steam is have your country set to Turkey or another poorer country and fund your wallet with TF2 Mann. Co Keys.

(BF6 Example)

It's not for purchasing. If you have spent $300 or added at least $300 to your steam account. You'll be set to green trust in CS2 and it's permanently locked there, since spam reporting has become such an issue.

I don't know where you heard that, but I have spent much more than $300 on my Steam account and I have had permanent red trust factor due to dropping 25-35 kills in my first 6 games, I played another FPS so when I started playing CS2 I shit stomped silvers and they all reported me and my trust has never recovered. Every single game I play has at least 1 rage hacker in prime so I quit playing altogether lol.

Valve is by far one of the worst companies in the world for creating MMR/Trust systems, a dog throwing darts would have better outcomes. If its between spending $300 to fix a system thats spitting in your face or just playing a free alternative like faceit or valorant, exhaust the alternatives first lol, 'Valve is fucking me over, I want to give them $300 so they like me' xd

This is new as of the last 6-8 months.

Can you link me to the Steam announcement for this? I'm genuinely curious about this. I know Rust did 'Premium' profiles when you have a certain amount spent in-game and that reduced hackers drastically, by 98% - so it does work. But that was only $15 and it reduced it by 98%, if Valve has it set at $300 I'd imagine it would reduce hackers by 99.999999999999999999% lol.

They would never publically announce this, because it would mean $$ = trust. However every single cheat site will confirm this. A friend has $369 spent on steam and has rage hacked from 0 games in premier up to 28k and is still 20 near by (green) also trust resets after 15 days of no playtime to yellow and vac-live count resets after 30 days.

I would take what cheaters say with a grain of salt. They're cheaters for a reason. And Facepunch did announce it and it hasn't caused any issues, it actually improved the game by a lot. The last game I played was 8 months ago and I had 3 rage hackers b2b2b, just don't go and waste your money for no reason.

I have verified it on my own accounts exceeding 300 spent as well.
