Thread: Does education really matter?

Do you honestly believe that education matters, if you learn yourself everything?

With the amount of tools we have these days. I don't really feel like it's a " must "

I myself only took elementary school.

Just because tools are getting smarter, it doesn't mean we have to get dumber.

Knowledge is powerful. The education system has proven to be problematic so for me it's totally fine to not go down that route, but knowledge in general is what gets you forward.

Hey The Pact, I'd like to get your feedback on that as a teacher.

Of course, I completely agree with you on the point stated above.

I never took education I managed to land multiple high jobs with way above good salary. But the case is different for everybody, it depends what you wanna do, where you are from, if you have the discipline & are able to learn on your own.

Yeah, but it's not the only thing that matters. Skills and mindset go a long way too.

Well it has his importance of course but its not everything

I know people who have 8 clases living a dream life and people with 2 universities who live a miserable life
