Thread: Dreams that comes true

Hi all ..

When was the last time that you had a dream that came true ..

It could be anything : Maybe a place you visited or some one you talked to or it could be a major event ..

Well , i've had this dream around 8 years ago , about some one getting really sick and dying , and old man he was a neighbour at our work place ..

The next morning when i woke up and went to work , a co worker greeted me with the bad news , specifically this day : how ?? Why ?? He was doing well .. these thing have no logical explanation to me ..

I've had dreams that ended up happening in real life not long after which was crazy because I remember saying how it felt life Déjà Vu.

Last year, I dreamed I ran into an old friend.

Next week, I actually did and we laughed about the timing.

That's eerie... I've had moments like that too where something from a dream played out almost exactly in real life. It really makes you wonder if dreams sometimes pick up on things we can't consciously sense.

Well , studies says that our subconscious plays a role in expecting events and we see it in our dreams since our dreams comes mostly from our subconscious ..

Yeah, that makes sense. It's wild how much our subconscious notices and processes without us realizing. Dreams almost feel like its way of sending clues our waking mind can't piece together yet.

But , the real question is : Why it happens when we are asleep hmm .. ?? That's when our super computer (subconscious) is working at its best without any interruptions ??

Exactly! It's like once the noise of the day shuts off, the subconscious finally gets room to process everything freely. Maybe sleep is when it connects the dots we miss while awake. Almost like background processing for the brain.
