One of my biggest regrets has got to be breaking up with my one ex girlfriend who I genuinely liked and was a total hottie. I had to do it because she was given the choice of choosing me or her family and she chose me but I felt really bad and didn't want to throw her family away because of me so I made the tough call and broke it up with her.

When I say she was a hottie I mean total dime piece inside and out with the most amazing personality too. Definitely regret losing her but I think it was what's best for her.

Dabbling and giving up with VM's in 2018-17 is a mild regret.

That's a tough situation, and it really shows how much you cared about her well-being. It sucks to lose someone you genuinely liked, but sometimes making the selfless choice is the hardest yet most respectable thing you can do.

I regret letting good moments pass without truly enjoying them.

I was too focused on the next goal to feel the present.

But you still abandoned her. She did nothing wrong.

Wishing I started trying in school more when I was younger.

I was always a terrible student, but when I hit college, I got a lot more motivated.

Honestly, the thing I regret the most is not starting earlier whether it was making money online, learning skills, or taking certain opportunities.

Looking back, I wasted a lot of time overthinking instead of just trying stuff.

If I had moved sooner on a few things, my life would probably look very different right now.

I feel like I missed out on a lot of things growing up (high school and college). I wish I could go back and do it all
