For me its the brainrot memes and the new "67" trend

I have no clue what any of it is and i dont get why the new gen think its so great lol

Palestine - November 1, 2025, 6:32 pm

Lol it's just from a song by Skrilla

He's actually from Philly like me, I've met him before he's a good dude

xHeaven - November 1, 2025, 6:34 pm

Getting excited about mops and robovacuums instead of new games and gaming PC stuff.

Also looking back at songs that came out in the last 2 years, then realizing they came out 15 years ago, not 2.

Deany - November 1, 2025, 6:36 pm

Idk what 67 is but sounds like brain rot

I go out of my way to drive on new roads.

It is a minor expedition.

I feel like such an old head when new video games don't interest me at all anymore.

They don't give me the same enjoyment as before.

I trie BO7 and didn't think it was bad, but I don't enjoy it enough to play daily.

When I see what the are the new cartoons now. It makes me know how old I am. Haha

MaplePatriot17 - November 2, 2025, 6:49 am

Just the realization that 2010 was 15 years ago is enough to make me feel old.

The internet isn't what it used to be. Everything is so corporate now, and hacker subculture seems all but dead.

Well , interesting but painful question there :

1st : the grey hair ..

2nd : Some nostalgic stuff we used to watch and some 1 mentions them in a conversation ..

3rd : people younger than me getting married ..

It's the new slangs for me such as:

Swag - aura?

Stfu - sybau?

Rekt - mogged?

Who invented this? Bring back the 2000s slangs.

When teenagers call 2018 "a long time ago".

My soul leaves my body.

onmercury - January 14, 2026, 6:33 pm

When I wake up automatically every morning and find that my alarm clock hasn't gone off yet.

During adolescence, it was necessary to sleep for eight to ten hours every day to avoid drowsiness.

I should have a long sleep constitution myself. My sleep time is gradually decreasing, although I don't want to admit it, my body won't deceive.
