Reactive phishing pages or just passwords? Installation? Webserver setup? Domain registration assistance? HTTPS?

Excellent question. A traditional phishing page logs the username and password and redirects the user to the cloned site. A reactive phishing page proxies requests to the legitimate domain through all steps of the login process and, if successful, obtains an active session. I don't mean to trash your sales, but if you offer phishing pages for Facebook, Instagram, Gmail, Outlook, Snapchat, i.e. sites people want to phish, you are quite literally ripping them off.
