Thread: What stable coin would you keep money in for the future?

Biggy_Asian - November 11, 2025, 4:31 pm

Was wondering what stable coin like BTC, ETH whatever else would be best or what ration to split up a pool into.

Lets say you have 1k, you want to put half in one crypto like BTC and am not sure with the rest wwyd?

There is no wrong answers and that is just an example to get a mind of what to really say when replying however is not supposed to depict my situation as I am just planning ahead.

is your plan to stake the Stablecoin?

jcole - November 11, 2025, 5:50 pm

I keep my money in USDC with 4.25% APY

Do you have any money invested in btc? I am losing too much money from this btc pitfall and getting ready to bail before I end up losing my whole investment which isn't even that much

Mainly just to hold, make profit passively even if it is small or is risk of going down in value a little bit.

Where do you stake bro?

RangoWorld - November 12, 2025, 3:16 am

Stable then probably half in USDT and another in USDC.

Staking is a good option as well.

Coinbase

DAI erc20

Compared to USDT (which can be blocked)

A good option

KyleTheXyle - November 12, 2025, 10:38 am

usdc is a good choice

Have you tried Sui ecosystem?

<https://suilend.fi/>

Offering 5.9% with USDC right now.

You said you stake with Coinbase, I wouldn't want to be part of the centralized system for staking if I had other options.

USDT or USDC both have enough money and have been around for long enough

Anytime I'm looking ever at which exchange or where to hold or what's most important

I'm always looking at who's operating with the most provable money in the cleanest manner

Better than holding some random version that has no proof or less volume & trust
