2 is behind CloudFlare. It can certainly be frustrating to have something appear vulnerable, get the number of columns, then fail. I'm almost certain that the target can be injected, but that CloudFlare is blocking attempts like it's supposed to.

"/home/c99281/michelle-fashion.ru/www/inc/urlparse.inc" A full filepath in the error. That's an ouch.

I have a theory that the parameter in the first URL is just a redirect and does not query any database. By using a single quote after /go/, it's obviously being fed to the database, but there's nothing there.

I wouldn't call myself an expert, but it seems pretty clear that this is a positive injection test, but it's totally useless. Maybe learn some other attacks?

I URL-encoded the payload but got an illegal query string.

knxtxx97 - November 17, 2025, 4:51 pm
I've literally been to all of them but there's nothing interesting there, I suspect I don't know the Cyrillic alphabet and their databases... the author insisted on *.ru, I'd like some shops or casinos, they're definitely vulnerable, but who has the gold coins?

I cant connecr to 1 site
