This adiction its such a dangerous addiction as the bad efects of it you dont feel but you dont have idea how much it affects your brain

Plus its not a discused topic and people tend to avoid asking for help as its a shameful topic

Something clicked in my brain when i searched up why i feel like this and my symptoms been doing it for 13 years two times everyday expect few days

I didnt think much of it, it kills your emotions makes you numb you first realize it when you quit, btw can people notice your porn addict?

porn and fast-food are damage the health , best way to get married and stay happy

RangoWorld - November 15, 2025, 2:32 am

If you cannot stop yourself from porn on your command and will. If you it comes in the way of your life. Like you spending time on porn instead of socializing or working. Then you are most likely an addict.

That being said. You need to slowly start cutting off. Going cold turkey maybe really hard if you have been watching it for so long.

Go slow. Try it once a day then every other day. It will be a long journey. Don't think of doing it cold turkey but slowly limit your dependency on it. Because the upside is so much more worth than this.

Well not so much people but some experienced people in life will feel you and also women will feel it

This addiction kills your energy and it makes you unattractive to women as the sexual energy you hold in you its the one who makes women attracted

Yes, a majority can for sure. I stopped a while back and just went to imagination or pictures some times. Has helped me keep everything in check without having too much pent up energy. If going down this road I suggest learning about dopamine as a whole. It effects memory, focus, passion and a good bit more. Porn, video games, social media, fast food and anything else that spikes your dopamine should be monitored. Some people can moderate and some can't. I struggle to moderate so I found my life improved significantly the more of those I cut off. Fast food is the only one out of those I still can struggle with but not near as bad as it used to be. Taking vitamins for your brain and working out can also help reverse negative effects to your dopamine. Good luck with the learning process! You've already realized the problem and that's the first step.

Yeah not as much fast food as a whole versus extremely sugary food. It spikes dopamine. The vitamins are different for every person. Depends on your diet and environment for what you may need. In theory a well rounded diet gives you all the vitamins you need. Many are skeptical about the industry and rightly so. Tons of marketing and fake claims. You could compare them to medicine. If you're not sick and take medicine then you won't think it works and is fake. If you take vitamins for things you're not deficient in then they seem like they don't work. There are apps you can plug your diet into and it'll tell you what you may be lacking or can get a full blood panel at the doctor that will also show your levels for different ones. One I recommend for everyone is fish oil/omega 3s. Find a trusted brand and take them daily. Such a broad topic it's hard to recommend vitamins for people without knowledge of the person's lifestyle.

Once you take a step back and become aware of it, you realize how much of your life you have literally wasted to tugging on your meat. SO much time I wish I could get back

ailo - December 4, 2025, 4:25 pm

self awareness is good now, now i know its dangerous and bad
