Thread: Where can I share my code that I made with ChatGPT?

MutatedArm0964 - December 4, 2025, 7:56 pm

I posted one yesterday but it didnt get traction as far as I can tell, oh well. I just wanted to share my code and have people test it. I DID say in my last post that people didn't have to share their results with me. Changing that, I kind of want to see the results from anyone wanting to test my code, only because I'm not using a native environment for the python script I made and I'm curious what it can actually do in a native environment. I have an updated version of tthe code I last posted. I have a link to my github and I'll post it when I find the appropriate place to share it. Thanks in advance.

I think it got no traction because people don't care for AI Slop.

My thoughts are that its only slop if there's no care taken and no creativity to whatever someone had AI create but I get what you mean. I dont like watching AI created videos. There are some good AI stuff out there and aren't slop because they're not just doing it for quick cash grab or for views. Codex Mortis is an example of AI Slop as far as I know. But yeah, I appreciate your view point though.
