This contest can't go on until you reach the award. Contests need to have a clear end date. It's already been a month.

I only structured my giveaway this way because I saw others doing the same for three months without a single comment from staff: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6309834>

You yourself participated in this giveaway, without a single mention to him of this being a problem?
<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6309834&pid=62836687#pid62836687>

If I need to make changes because I missed something in the rules I'm more than happy to but I'm confused at the difference in treatment here.

That's on free services and giveaways. You're in member contests. Different section of the site. He was doing QL4QL which is a common giveaway in that section and he added a prize to a random member which many members do. Which he ran the giveaway multiple times in the same thread with several end dates and restarts.

Yes, this hasn't ended yet. You need to Quick Love his original post of the thread though.

i am What is your QL progress looking like and what is the end date for this giveaway? It doesn't seem that you've added one yet following Charlie mentioning a little over a week ago that you need one.

Mooooookie - January 14, 2026, 10:27 pm

Sent a QL days ago on the thread. Good luck with QL award?

Monero-chan - January 19, 2026, 5:05 pm

Did everything you asked, good luck everyone.

P.S: You can display awards in posts directly by typing [award=x] where X is the ID for the award, to get the ID:

1. head to the awards page
2. when you find the award you want to display, hover your cursor over the name and look at the bottom left of your browser window on desktop, on mobile you need to hold the name until a link pops up
3. it should show <https://hackforums.net/myawards.php?awid=X> where X is the ID of that award

so for example, the ID for the Monero award is 96 so replacing X with 96 shows which is the icon for the Monero award.

Hope that helps.

I imagine he just assumed that he would have gotten the award by now and so this would naturally have ended already, but like I've seen be the case with these sort of QL award goal threads, it often takes a lot longer than expected. Considering it's been almost 2 months now though, this really should come to a close. The giveaway should have had a definitive end date and then if the QL award goal was met prior to that, it could have ended early is all.

You know, checking someone's profile daily for a month and complaining about them giving away free money is next level rent-free. ??

Yes, this is the case. How long is reasonable for these sorts of things? This is the first contest I've ever run.

Would saying I'm cutting it off February 28th be reasonable? I think 3 months is roughly how long the thread which inspired me to post this ran, but he did run it until he got the award.

I would say that giveaways in this section normally run for a month tops, even those that are giving away hundreds of dollars or 6 digit bytes. Usually less time though for smaller amount giveaways like yours, respectfully of course. It's obviously generous of you to do a giveaway at all. I actually can't remember the last giveaway there may have been where the length was over a month, but whatever it was if any, it was no doubt for quite a large value.

When it comes to giveaways in this section, there should always be a definitive end date. Nothing wrong with having a separate goal such as for the QL award being achieved that makes it end sooner, but it shouldn't just indefinitely go for months on end. Imagine if there was just a bunch of people doing a giveaway similar to yours with an open ended end date based solely on achieving the award. They'd all be going for months as yours has. It would just be quite silly and could also be abused in a way since they could additionally ask for +pop and then for that whole open ended amount of time gaining such, just trying to look more "trusted" and setting up for a scam. You obviously don't ask for +pop and I'm in no way trying to relate that last point to you, but hopefully you see where I'm coming from with IF people did that as well.

Anyway, I'm obviously not staff (though Charlie who is did already tell you to set an end date weeks ago), but I would personally just pick a winner for this given how long it's gone on and while getting a bit out of hand. Then, since you're still working towards the award I would either make a QL 4 QL thread in the free services and giveaways section or I would do a new giveaway here simply requiring a QL and while listing a definitive end date for it so that this same situation doesn't occur again. You could even do both. You should pop into public convo here and there as well to ask others if they have/can QL you too. Multiple members have before and most all of us are normally happy to do it.

Yeah I'm starting to get unimpressed but then I'm grumpy because I've just got out of being in the hospital for six days. Also some people don't seem to realise that only one quick love counts PER PERSON. It does no good to quick love someone multiple times hoping for multiple quick loves back. I'm sure "I AM" is not one of the people confused by this though.

You still have only given: 46 QL and you have Received: 59. You need to be giving out more quickloves to individual members and I understand being reluctant to give out bytes but you can try and get a commitment to get the QL for QL but you need to get on with this.

As far as I can tell I've QL'd everyone in the thread! In a earlier reply I mentioned I'll be ending it on the 28th of this month, so we're coming up on the deadline soon. Send QLs for your last minute entries and, if Pact is willing, I'll ask him to select a winner.

I may just run another round of this contest after to finish up the award and give more love back to the community, so if you don't make the entry deadline, you may have another chance to get a free award/money from me. ?
