Thread: Do i sell my ADA today.

Costanza - December 9, 2025, 9:18 am

Title says it all.

I will take a hefty loss , midnight launch and market pumping today it's up abit . let me know thanks

SUI-3183372 - December 9, 2025, 10:06 am

If you sell today, ADA will certainly hit $1+ in the next 90 days.

If you don't sell today, ADA will certainly drop to $0.10 in the next 90 days.

it's how it goes trying to time the market

I believe that we are so early in a long bull market for crypto. You should cut your losses with ADA, and regain your money with something else. ADA isnt the sauce. There are a lot of other great options. DYOR, but I prefer ETH and Link as my main bags. I have lots of conviction with these 2 coins, but SOL, Sui, etc. are good alts.

links just as useless as ada bro lmao , i like sui a lot though. selling ada to buy other alts seems retarded

Maskin - December 9, 2025, 7:28 pm

I'd sell at least some of it, buy BTC and forget.

I disagree, ChainLink is by far my favorite coin currently.

but, what do I know.. You clearly know what you are doing, righttt?

Tried to warn you sir.

Sorry.

Honestly, just swap it all for BTC and just sit back. You want rich in months. Won't happen. You can do well in a decade. Realistic and a decade goes by faster than you think.

Let's say you're 30. You have say 30-40 years of working age left. In a decade $25k invested into Bitcoin can 10x to $250k. Sure, doesn't sound like a lot but it's money sitting. Hopefully you make other smart moves and have another 100k-150k floating around. The next decade is when it starts to get fun. BTC at $5m and your investments now are $1.5m. That's only a 3x return so it's completely normal with just 15% APR. Its realistic.

So you're 50 and have $1.5 which doesn't include if you're added to your investments. After 20 years you realize what you have set aside is good and you probably spend your income enjoying your life.

Just imagine what the next decade does for you. You're wise, you've made smart investments based on LONG-TERM goals and you're in your 50's and feel secure.

Plan accordingly. You can keep trying to get rich tomorrow or ensure you're rich by 60. Which path?

An overwhelming amount of the crypto industry has reliance on Chainlink, either directly or indirectly. Chainlink isn't sexy or exciting, but it's what provides accurate and current pricing information to just about everything. Other chains, DeFi protocols, tons of dapps are all reliant on Chainlink's pricing oracles.

Polymarket, for example, is reliant on Chainlink's data streams, and I imagine most prediction platforms are as well.

Diversify, don't panic, and DCA over a 10-20 year period :)

It would take an anomaly that we've never seen before to disrupt that type of plan. We've seen 3 year bad streaks, but not 10-20 year bad streaks.

This seems to dismiss or ignore what I told you about investment long-term and only buying BTC. You'll keep losing money and I'll have to keep saying "told you so", until you one day get it.

And be careful about utility as an investment. Chainlink down 72% from ATH. The crypto market is maturing. Pegging usage to pricing is imho a myth now.

The best way to invest in utility is to build a product with the utility tokens, rather than buying the tokens outright... and support multiple currencies on the platform.

we always had the thought that "if this token goes to $0.000001, our app still works 100% fine". Our client was pissed when his Polygon value tanked, but his platform was 100% working. Not our problem that he banked on crypto going up forever to fund it, so we paused on that project. It is a shame though, it was fun for a time.

People misinterpret utility too much. Yes, usefulness is great. No, it doesn't mean the raw token value will go up, especially when many use cases benefit from price stability due to timing, app reserves & balances, potential arbitrage vulnerabilities, etc...

And that's the complex part. You have those devs who want tokens to increase in value so they can add to earnings and those devs who want cheap transactions. Clients imho want cheap transactions, token price becomes irrelevant. IMHO I believe unless the token is DeFi centric, I doubt there will be much price value to Smart Contract blockchains. Bitcoin continues to prove it's the gold standard of crypto as an investment grade vehicle.

Yeah it really is a shame how many projects are created purely for profit in short term. I think it's okay to maintain a treasury, or take a fee, rake, or whatever you want to call it, but devs need to honor commitments over 5-10+ year periods... It would be better to burn or refund all tokens than to rug-pull a project because if you do the honest thing, you will move into the next project with even better partners, ideas, and public trust. People who convince thousands to invest and then rugpull are idiots. Imagine if 1000 people were willing to invest in your next idea... Why would you scam them? If they can do that, they can continue to invest, or invest in the next idea. I don't get it. It's better to work hard honestly over years until you have a career worth 6, 7, or 8 figures as ongoing revenue than it is to scam your way to a one time heist.

I agree with you. Ecosystem is important, defi is a major part of that. I am hoping to see more utility contracts in the decentralized computing areas because people can sell LLM responses on-chain automatically which is very exciting.

Bitcoin also has the added benefit of being able to adapt. If it was ever at risk of failing, the chain can fork and alter its source however we want to maintain the ledger, add capabilities etc.

Quite honestly , when i sleep i vibrate for hours before i finally can sleep.

i'm losing hair , going grey at 26.

I feel like passing out everyday my blood pressure is so fucking high.

cardano has ruined my fucking life.

currently jobless and i put all my money into it this year and dc'ad all year and all my savings.

rotate to bitcoin nah. whats the point iv already 60% of my networth. may aswell ride it to 0. most likely will have a heart attack in the next few months away

Feel really bad for you don't get me wrong, and I don't want to be that guy however it seems like you lack any sense of self-responsibility. You yourself chose to essentially gamble your entire networth on a coin that you seemingly know/knew nothing about as the bullmarket began to slow down. What happened to researching what you're investing(/literally full porting) in? Trying to time the market?

Even now it seems like you're not doing any due diligence, but rather relying on what absolute strangers tell you. I mean come on, "Hi do I sell today, lmk thx", like brother?

You're a grown ass man, and again I feel bad for you, and it's worth mentioning that I'm also in a similar situation as you due to my ADA investment, but it's time to take a deep breath, take responsibility, do shit yourself and get yourself out of this mess. And yes, you CAN get out of this mess, your life isn't over. You're only 26. Chill.

Also want to add that your loss isn't realized yet, it can still go up (and ofcourse down), but what were you expecting, to be up in a couple of months? You didn't DCA responsibly if you don't have any funds left to continue DCAing.

You're not old enough to understand yet that it's only money. It comes and goes. Life, you get just one shot at and once it's gone, it's gone for good. Talk to plenty of very successful people and they'll give you at least one story of when they lost it all and were miserable. It's not the fall that counts, it's the getting up.

I don't have a lot of sympathy about your money or your attitude. You wanted to get rich quick. You're not even working. Go get a job. Do the right thing and stop moaning about things.

Sorry to hear you've had failed businesses. So have I. They were successful, until they weren't. Common enough for an entrepreneur. Just figure out your next move. It's laziness that is your enemy more than anything else.

Even though I have investments into crypto, I still have a job that I work at. I still earn income regardless where the market goes up or down. This is what you really need to focus on. If you are working, no matter what job it is, even if it's McDonalds or whatever, you get your mind off what goes on in the market.

I'm sure you're not paying any bills right now at your age. Maybe you're living with your parents and have no worries. I'm around your age and I have myself my own place, I pay my own bills, even though everything's expensive, I feel a sense of freedom and privacy.

If you want to make money and be successful, get out of the market and learn a business trade. Get yourself a license. Go to school. Go fly a plane up in the sky or something.

Stop being so fucking pathetic bro. You said you want to KYS a few days ago. You made all the decisions that led yourself to this point. Get a job that supports a healthy lifestyle and comfort, and only invest what you are comfortable lighting on fire... especially with alt coins. ADA is GREAT tech with a dumb loser founder who is arrogant as fuck. Take your fucking loss and make it back up with something better.

Instead of these sob stories and suicide threats why don't you post something like "I have XXXXX amount of dollars, what should I buy and why?"

I know you weren't responding to me but you are the one who threatened to take your life over the loss of money. You can't really use that as a dig on someone else when you do that.

Me personally, in 2005 I was in debt $300k. That's past my assets at the time. Had to claw my way back up. I had a wife and 4 kids to support. Took me about 2-3 years to turn it around.

You have to stop feeling sorry for yourself immediately and figure out a plan. Your first plan was shit. Either you learn from it or you repeat it.
