Recently got into a motorcycle accident, and tore my maniscus. Just a reminder to you guys to drive carefully. It's very easy to feel untouchable on the road, but some situations are out of our control.

Always been afraid of 2 wheels and a motor. Which side got hurt? Left side or right side?

Left side. I used to be a big fan of motorcycles, working on them, racing them, but this definitely opened my eyes to how vulnerable you are on one.

You don't stop cooking stuff on a range because you burn your hand. Be mindful, don't stop.

I'm glad you're okay. I actually had a motorcycle accident a few years back when I was drunk, and after that I stopped drinking completely. ?

Same I was rear ended at a light, glad it wasn't as serious as it could have been. Glad you are alive :)

Glad you're recovering.

But here is a hack: If you drive fast enough, you can escape death.

I love that thought. I have the music from Smokey and the Bandit playing in my head. ?

Seriously, I know my limitations and would never get close to a motorcycle myself.

At least you are alive. Motorcycle accidents can be freaks.

Hopefully you didn't had impact on your head in anyway. Even a concussion can be dangerous

Completely understand that. It's normal to feel invincible or just not dwell on risks too much with things. Left side though? I guess the doctor said you're all right now! ?? Sorry if too soon.
