Thread: Whats One Skill You Learned From the Internet That Actually Helped You?

R5N3T - December 13, 2025, 10:33 am

Hey folks,

The internet is full of useless information, but every now and then you come across something that genuinely helps you in real life.

It could be anything — coding, graphic design, marketing, fixing things, or even just learning how to communicate better online.

What's one skill you picked up from the internet or forums that actually made a difference for you?

Curious to hear your stories.

The internet has taught me skepticism, that has been valuable.

That's a really good point. Learning to question information before accepting it can save you from a lot of mistakes.

I learn almost everything online. Even in school I used mostly online resources to learn

I'm self taught everyone about the internet.

FreeBSD and Linux Administration

PHP

HTML/CSS

Basically self-taught myself to be where I am today. No formal education.

Some things I self taught;

- Writing emails.
- Researching.
- Script writing.
- Graphic Design.
- Motion Design.
- Video Editing.

- Python / Html / C#
- Basic Opsec.
- Basic Hacking.

That's really cool. Being self-taught like that takes a lot of discipline and passion. Respect for building your skills on your own and getting to where you are today.
