

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Man Sends \$30,000 to Adult Film Star Fiancée He's Never Met

The Pact - December 16, 2025, 1:12 am

Man Wires $30,000 to Adult Film Star Fiancée He's Never Seen in Real Life
$30,000 Gone: Man Falls for Adult Film Star Fiancée He's Never Met

[Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6_-KwmnEGVc]

Aeowulf - December 16, 2025, 3:47 am

I can't believe people are still falling for these...

The Pact - December 16, 2025, 3:55 am

(Dec 16, 2025 04:47 AM)Aeowulf Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I can't believe people are still falling for these...
A new type of scam is where a scammer cultivates a long-term relationship, then convinces the victim to "invest" money in a fraudulent cryptocurrency or foreign exchange platform. The fake platform initially shows high returns to encourage more significant investments before the scammer disappears with all the funds.

Criminal organizations also now use Large Language Models (LLMs) to automate initial messages and outreach to a large number of potential targets, making the process more efficient and scalable.

Scammers use AI to analyze a victim's online behavior and emotional state, tailoring their manipulative tactics to exploit specific vulnerabilities more effectively.

JoshAllen - December 16, 2025, 4:07 am

It blows my mind how many people fall for this kind of stuff still

I recently had this promoted video of this guy posting his "girlfriend" and it was some model AI video saying his name that was obviously fake.

People fell for this stuff decades ago, and with AI, it plays with their delusion even more.

The Pact - December 16, 2025, 4:14 am

(Dec 16, 2025 05:07 AM)Josh Allen Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It blows my mind how many people fall for this kind of stuff still

I recently had this promoted video of this guy posting his "girlfriend" and it was some model AI video saying his name that was obviously fake.

People fell for this stuff decades ago, and with AI, it plays with their delusion even more.
The romance scammers that tried to approach me online were all super bad at it. One was trying to pretend to be Eminem and didn't know Eminem has three daughters. Another was posting a photo of a super white guy in a military uniform and listed his race as "Native American" because he thought that meant a white person born in America. ?[Because the scammer is in Ghana or Nigeria.]

Another speaks to be one time and then tells me I need to send him money for a new car engine. Another the minute he got me off a main site says "Now you have to send me money for my rent. I can't pay my rent. Are you going to send it?" I said "No."

He says but don't you want me to be your boyfriend don't you find me attractive?" I said, "You live too far away I'm not in Nigeria." He literally says "Oh you're too intelligent," but later tries again.

They expect this to work on the second conversation. They are so useless. Not like the ones on these shows.

wavyBaby - December 29, 2025, 9:26 pm

Still crazy to see people still getting catfished online in this day and age

The Pact - December 29, 2025, 9:34 pm

(Dec 29, 2025 10:26 PM)wavyBaby Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Still crazy to see people still getting catfished online in this day and age

And it's often a problem for Americans who get scammed that they are so focused only on the USA that they will believe Africans that the reason their voice has an accent on the phone is because as a child they lived in France for a while and Germany for a while, and Sweden for a while so their accent is all mixed up and sounds Nigerian. Only they don't say the sounds Nigerian part. ?

Karwus - January 14, 2026, 7:11 am

Which one of you e-whoring guys it was? :D or was it a real girl scamming?

The Pact - January 15, 2026, 4:18 am

(Jan 14, 2026 08:11 AM)Karwus Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Which one of you e-whoring guys it was? :D or was it a real girl scamming?

Look for the post in Bragging Rights that says "I made 30,000 Ewhoring. I made 30K in one week from AI Only Fans Management!

No but for real it's always a man in Nigeria on this YouTube show.

JoseMar - January 18, 2026, 2:40 pm

And there are a lot of people who get scammed but don't talk about it because of shame. Honestly, I think the ones who usually fall for this are people who are generally lonely, who feel the need for love, and they end up meeting some kid from India on the internet, believing it's the love of their life...?

axaxax - January 26, 2026, 3:58 pm gotta be paid actors lamao...

The Pact - January 26, 2026, 10:48 pm

(Jan 18, 2026 03:40 PM)JoseMar Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) And there are a lot of people who get scammed but don't talk about it because of shame. Honestly, I think the ones who usually fall for this are people who are generally lonely, who feel the need for love, and they end up meeting some kid from India on the internet, believing it's the love of their life...?

Actually, it's usually a Nigerian with these particular scams or sometimes they're from Ghana. Indians seem to do different types of scams like ringing elderly people and telling them that they owe money on a credit card or utility bill and must pay it back by purchasing gift cards.

It's mostly Nigerians doing the romance scams and people in call centres in India scamming the elderly about pretend credit card debt etc...

RangoWorld - February 2, 2026, 7:14 am

I kinda feel bad for people a bit. It's getting a bit too chaotic. How did we even reached this point as society.

The Pact - February 2, 2026, 2:38 pm

(Feb 2, 2026 08:14 AM)RangoWorld Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I kinda feel bad for people a bit. It's getting a bit too chaotic. How did we even reached this point as society.

This stuff seems to come out of Nigeria every time. Like I've read they do the same scams in Ghana and Malaysia but on the TV and Youtube channels when they track them down it's from Nigeria often in one area that probably has a whole call centre doing them. Lagos, Nigeria it mostly is.

Hackers - February 4, 2026, 6:13 pm

(Dec 16, 2025 05:07 AM)Josh Allen Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) People fell for this stuff decades ago, and with AI, it plays with their delusion even more.

These type of people are completely cooked. Unless they assume everything is AI (even real women), they'll fall right into the trap which is delusion of their own mind.

It's nutty that none of these people stop and think "wait, I've never met this person". I had a cross-country relationship, but had at least hung out with her a few times.

The Pact - February 5, 2026, 8:20 pm

(Dec 16, 2025 05:07 AM)Josh Allen Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It blows my mind how many people fall for this kind of stuff still

I recently had this promoted video of this guy posting his "girlfriend" and it was some model AI video saying his name that was obviously fake.

People fell for this stuff decades ago, and with AI, it plays with their delusion even more.

There was this one where the scammer had photoshopped so that Johnny Depp is holding up a sign saying "Marie I love you."

And so she believes she is really talking to Johnny Depp online and he NEEDS money lol what?

And I saw on these shows that they target people who are huge fans of someone and start out by saying to them, "Oh I am someone you may have heard of."

And then when the person questions them they start pretending to be the person they know this person is fan-tarding over. Sorry for offensive word but it fits.

The I realised someone had actually tried that with me once, but I'm not hanging around in fan forums I actually have written and published a book about a certain celebrity, so some scammer had just seen I had something about that celebrity on my profile since I'm literally promoting a book I wrote about a celebrity so this scammer started pretending to be this celebrity that I wrote a book about and they did the whole "Well, I'm actually someone you probably know. I'm quite famous," messaging me on social media.

And it was funny because they got the celebrity's number of children wrong and some other basic stuff about the celebrity wrong, and then they sent me a photo of a red safe and told me it had gold bars in it!

And I said to the wannabe scammer, "What is the point of showing me a photo of a safe? What is that supposed to prove?"

And the scammer said "It has gold bars in it that I want to send you these gold bars." It was all so stupid.

I said "How does showing me a photo of the outside of a staff prove to me it has gold bars in it?"
lmao.

Saterax - February 16, 2026, 3:44 pm

I always feel so odd when reading these, as it gets more and more common. These people are sending more money to people they've never seen than I have made in a year at some points.

It's hard to pick a side, realistically. Like yeah don't scam people booooo, but also, I feel as if it's natural selection of some sort at that point.

Maybe more people need to hear about the stories of some random guy that thought somebody he has never met or seen, let alone even talked to over the phone, and thought it was just casually normal to send them thousands of dollars.

I feel bad for both sides. Those that are most likely doing the scams in the first place to survive, and those that are foolish enough to send five digit amounts to random people.

Why marry someone on the brink of death to get their assets when you can just pretend to be someone on the internet and give it a few months? Society has gotten to a very interesting point.

These are the same people that clutch their wallet or change in their pocket a bit harder when seeing someone on the side of the road holding a sign asking for a few bucks, looking down upon them as if they're inferior when in reality they probably just had a bad hand, meanwhile they just sent some random dude across the world 10 grand because they sent a few photos that were AI generated.

We see it everyday, and it's funny because the same people telling most of us "Don't believe everything you see on the internet!" are now the ones sharing everything they see without giving it a miniscule amount of second thought.

No grandma, that boy with three arms and plastic shiny skin did not build his village in Africa a high speed rail out of wood. Christ.

anxom - March 8, 2026, 11:07 am

The way of the catfish will never die.

The Pact - March 8, 2026, 3:59 pm

(Feb 16, 2026 04:44 PM)Saterax Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I always feel so odd when reading these, as it gets more and more common. These people are sending more money to people they've never seen than I have made in a year at some points.

It's hard to pick a side, realistically. Like yeah don't scam people booooo, but also, I feel as if it's natural selection of some sort at that point.

Maybe more people need to hear about the stories of some random guy that thought somebody he has never met or seen, let alone even talked to over the phone, and thought it was just casually normal to send them thousands of dollars.

I feel bad for both sides. Those that are most likely doing the scams in the first place to survive, and those that are foolish enough to send five digit amounts to random people.

Why marry someone on the brink of death to get their assets when you can just pretend to be someone on the internet and give it a few months? Society has gotten to a very interesting point.

These are the same people that clutch their wallet or change in their pocket a bit harder when seeing someone on the side of the road holding a sign asking for a few bucks, looking down upon them as if they're inferior when in reality they probably just had a bad hand, meanwhile they just sent some random dude across the world 10 grand because they sent a few photos that were AI generated.

We see it everyday, and it's funny because the same people telling most of us "Don't believe everything you see on the internet!" are now the ones sharing everything they see without giving it a miniscule amount of second thought.

No grandma, that boy with three arms and plastic shiny skin did not build his village in Africa a high speed rail out of wood. Christ.

Quite often they are sending five figures made by someone else in their family who left them all that money they made to take care of them and they've never experienced being poor. But they sent all the money to Nigeria because someone in Nigeria sent them attractive photos of someone European and said, "Yes, yes I do love you."

Saterax - March 10, 2026, 3:11 pm

(Mar 8, 2026 03:59 PM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Quite often they are sending five figures made by someone else in their family who left them all that money they made to take care of them and they've never experienced being poor. But they sent all the money to Nigeria because someone in Nigeria sent them attractive photos of someone European and said, "Yes, yes I do love you."

Yeah, unfortunately that is something I hear a lot especially. Sometimes people don't get the actual value of money and toss it like it's nothing. Meanwhile Uncle Roger just sent the equivalent of a salary for a small working family to some random person he met a few days ago on Facebook.

Lowkey - March 10, 2026, 3:23 pm

What's the problem here?

The Pact - March 11, 2026, 1:14 am

(Mar 10, 2026 03:23 PM)Y0ink Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What's the problem here?

You know you won't get bytes for this post right? But if you're on the side of the Nigerian scammers meh I really don't know how poor they were before they start these, but they just have a whole playbook of tricks that they didn't even invent themselves most of them.

And on that Youtube channel almost ever single "uncovering" is in Nigeria usually Lagos Nigeria, although supposedly Ghana and Malaysia have a lot of these types of scams going.

Ash Ketchum - March 11, 2026, 2:15 am im always perplexed when i see stuff like this, perhaps its because i quite enjoy solitude and i don't get the neverending feeling of loneliness so i can't relate to what these men may be potentially feeling, but at some point you need to question the return on what you're paying for.

it'll forever be a money maker taking advantage of these people and i'm never sure if to feel bad for them or laugh.

i guess its like anything if you're receiving gratification on any level for what you're spending your money on then to each their own, personally not something i would ever do nor enjoy but i could say the same about fancy cars and many people spend stupid amounts on that, this is perceived differently but in the end its just another means to an end.

Rolex Mindset - March 11, 2026, 3:07 am

Let's call it out for what it is: financial abuse committed by a female. Financial domination, paypigging, call it whatever is psychological exploitation against men conducted by women. Of course psychologists refuse to acknowledge it. Naming it explicitly doesn't suit the agenda.

[The Pact] It was a man in Nigeria. [/The Pact]

The Pact - March 11, 2026, 4:44 am

(Mar 11, 2026 03:07 AM)Rolex Mindset Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Let's call it out for what it is: financial abuse committed by a female. Financial domination, paypigging, call it whatever is psychological exploitation against men conducted by women. Of course psychologists refuse to acknowledge it. Naming it explicitly doesn't suit the agenda.

You are genuinely a moron. It was a man in Nigeria doing a romance scam. Please grow up.

You aren't much smarter than the guy who got scammed because you apparently believe that the woman in the photos is the one who did the scam, instead of the fact that the European women [and men] in these photos, in these scams are also victims as their photos and identity have been taken and misused by men in Lagos Nigeria.

And if you yourself or other men are so obsessed with sex that you want to send money to women who make less money than you, for sexy photos that's not psychological exploitation, you are choosing to buy something that you want.

Rolex Mindset - March 11, 2026, 5:05 am

(Mar 11, 2026 04:44 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You are genuinely a moron. It was a man in Nigeria doing a romance scam. Please grow up.

You aren't much smarter than the guy who got scammed because you apparently believe that the woman in the photos is the one who did the scam, instead of the fact that the European women [and men] in these photos, in these scams are also victims as their photos and identity have been taken and misused by men in Lagos Nigeria.

And if you yourself or other men are so obsessed with sex that you want to send money to women who make less money than you, for sexy photos that's not psychological exploitation, you are choosing to buy something that you want.

Incel here gave me -12 popularity. lol

This isn't limited to a Nigerian eWhoring. Have you ventured off this website and onto social media or any type of dating app in the last 10 years? Female exploitation of males is happening at unprecedented levels.

Women on social media constantly are constantly whoring themselves out and demanding payment. Twitch, X, Reddit, you can't escape it. You will be absolutely hard pressed to find a girl who doesn't have a linktree in her bio that links to CashApp or OnlyFans.

This is exploitation of a vulnerable population. Your comments are victim-blaming.

Men get accused of financial abuse and psychological manipulation for a lot less than this.

I was speaking to the larger female-led exploitation industrial complex that exists on social media. You are part of the problem by denying it exists (or is it just your ignorance?). Dumbass.

The Pact - March 11, 2026, 5:11 am

(Mar 11, 2026 05:05 AM)Rolex Mindset Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Incel here gave me -12 popularity. lol

This isn't limited to a Nigerian eWhoring.

You are part of the problem by denying it exists (or is it just your ignorance?). Dumbass. You want to buy sexy times and you pay for sexy times, and that's somehow exploiting you because you should get everything for free?

You do realise that about a sixteenth of the men on this forum are pretending to be females online with "ewhore packs" to get some of that money, or they're managing only fans accounts for women, so a lot of the men on here are involved in that industry.

You really are a massive fool. You want sexy photos and videos with no love, no romance etc... then you go pay for that. That's your problem.

YOU want something without romance, without kindness, without love. You pay for it. You want it. They don't need you-- that's why you're so angry. Because you desire them and they don't have the same need for you. That makes you very very angry.

So you pay like any other industry where you want something. How is that "financial exploitation" you utter moron?

Rolex Mindset - March 11, 2026, 5:13 am

(Mar 11, 2026 05:11 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You want to buy sexy times and you pay for sexy times, and that's somehow exploiting you because you should get everything for free. You do realise that about an eighth of the men on this forum are pretending to be females online with "ewhore packs" to get some of that money, or they're managing only fans, so a lot of the men on here are involved in that industry. You really are a massive fool. You want sex with no love, no romance etc... then you go pay for that. That's your problem.

YOU want something without romance, without kindness, without love. You pay for it. You want it. They don't need you-- that's why you're so angry. Because you desire them and they don't have the same need for you.

So you pay like any other industry where you want something. How is that "financial exploitation" you utter moron.

Taking advantage of vulnerable people with a potential addiction is exploitation in any other realm. Everyone understands it with clearly mentally ill people and drug addicts. But when it comes to women exploiting men you turn a blind eye to it. Hmm. Simp.

The Pact - March 11, 2026, 5:20 am

(Mar 11, 2026 05:13 AM)Rolex Mindset Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Taking advantage of vulnerable people with a potential addiction is exploitation in any other realm. Everyone understands it with clearly mentally ill people and drug addicts. But when it comes to women exploiting men you turn a blind eye to it. Hmm. Simp.

Oh we've closed down all the casinos and bars now have we? Society doesn't very heavily encourage drinking and vaping and smoking and gambling?

Please grow up and get over your misogyny you're talking absolute trash. And who is making the most out of Only Fans? Often the male "managers." Please try and grow a brain. And your assumptions about my gender are also very stupid.

Hackers - March 11, 2026, 6:12 am

And to think this man is allowed to vote. Democracy's biggest flaw and biggest strength is the same: equality.

Lowkey - March 11, 2026, 6:46 am

(Mar 11, 2026 01:14 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You know you won't get bytes for this post right? But if you're on the side of the Nigerian scammers meh I really don't know how poor they were before they start these, but they just have a whole playbook of tricks that they didn't even invent themselves most of them.

And on that Youtube channel almost ever single "uncovering" is in Nigeria usually Lagos Nigeria, although supposedly Ghana and Malaysia have a lot of these types of scams going. Do you mean that thing with no value? Yikes!

No one can out-scam the man of many bytes. I have nothing to be scammed out of!

heatsuppressant - March 11, 2026, 12:31 pm

Deadass the funniest shit ive seen this day

BrainArchitect - March 11, 2026, 1:56 pm

why still people fall for girls its 2026 and still men are silly
I would never spent 30k on girl that i never met lmao [warn]

The Pact - March 13, 2026, 3:17 am

(Mar 11, 2026 01:56 PM)BrainArchitect Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) why still people fall for girls its 2026 and still men are silly

I would never spent 30k on girl that i never met lmao

It was a man in Nigeria. You people are not much smarter than the guy falling for the scam when you think the European women whose photos are stolen are the actual scammers. Holy Moly you guys are slow. ???

(Mar 11, 2026 12:31 PM)heatsuppressant Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Deadass the funniest shit ive seen this day
What is?

Komodo - March 13, 2026, 4:59 am

My girlfriend's cheating on me? Fuck.

The Pact - March 14, 2026, 6:13 am

(Mar 13, 2026 04:59 AM)Komodo Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) My girlfriend's cheating on me? Fuck.

Nah mate. Someone just stole her photos, bro. Unless your girlfriend is a man in Lagos, Nigeria. Which of course is always a possibility.

TheNaturalBoy - March 14, 2026, 10:16 pm

Damn, I guess it can be "fun" to a certain extent, but when you really think about it, it's extremely sad how someone can end up idealizing an internet personality. I don't think it's really the girl's fault either; after all, she's just a content creator who knows that adult content can be quite profitable. Still, we don't really know what strategy she uses to attract her audience—some people are simply more shameless than others.

Hopefully more people will take a step back and not let themselves be carried away by feelings of loneliness, although it seems that artificial intelligence is making that increasingly difficult, with virtual characters, virtual girlfriend websites, and all that.

The Pact - March 15, 2026, 1:47 am

(Mar 14, 2026 10:16 PM)TheNaturalBoy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Damn, I guess it can be “fun” to a certain extent, but when you really think about it, it’s extremely sad how someone can end up idealizing an internet personality. I don’t think it’s really the girl’s fault either; after all, she’s just a content creator who knows that adult content can be quite profitable. Still, we don’t really know what strategy she uses to attract her audience—some people are simply more shameless than others.

Hopefully more people will take a step back and not let themselves be carried away by feelings of loneliness, although it seems that artificial intelligence is making that increasingly difficult, with virtual characters, virtual girlfriend websites, and all that.

The woman's photos were stolen. The woman in the photos is not the one asking for any money from this particular man. She didn't even know her photos are stolen online and used by a man in Lagos, Nigeria who uses scripts that get passed around in Nigeria to target and pull the scams.

TheNaturalBoy - March 18, 2026, 1:36 am

(Mar 15, 2026 01:47 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The woman's photos were stolen. The woman in the photos is not the one asking for any money from this particular man. She didn't even know her photos are stolen online and used by a man in Lagos, Nigeria who uses scripts that get passed around in Nigeria to target and pull the scams.

Oh damn, well, it’s my fault for not watching the video carefully and understanding it properly—these are the consequences of not practicing my English enough. That aside, I just hope people don’t fall for these scams. It’s really unfortunate when someone takes advantage of a person’s mental vulnerability.

The Pact - March 18, 2026, 2:05 am

(Mar 18, 2026 01:36 AM)TheNaturalBoy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Oh damn, well, it’s my fault for not watching the video carefully and understanding it properly—these are the consequences of not practicing my English enough. That aside, I just hope people don’t fall for these scams. It’s really unfortunate when someone takes advantage of a person’s mental vulnerability.

Yeah it is quite common to get confused and think the people whose photos are stolen are doing the scam but they are 99.99999 % NOT the ones doing the scams. In all the shows I've watched on this and I have seen many over the years...even old ones on Dr Phil etc... it's only ever been the person in the photo and a person in the USA ONE TIME and every other time it has been someone in Nigeria or Ghana that stole someone's photos. Some of them even pretend to be a celebrity and fool a fan which is really fucking stupid to fall for.

I realised someone even tried that on me once. And they thought I was just some dumb fan of a celebrity and tried to pretend to me that they were that celebrity. But actually the reason I had that celebrity on my profile and stuff was because I wrote a whole fucking 75,000 word book on the celebrity. And they were trying to pretend to be the celebrity and getting stuff about him wrong and it was so stupid. Hahaha. And they sent me a photo of a red safe and told me that there were gold bars in the safe that they wanted to send to me. And I was laughing and I said "What is a photo of a safe supposed to prove. I can't see gold bars inside of it."?

I didn't tease the wannabe scammer much though because you never know how big of a psycho someone online actually is- so leading them on and messing with them might not be worth it.

TheNaturalBoy - March 18, 2026, 11:56 pm

(Mar 18, 2026 02:05 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah it is quite common to get confused and think the people whose photos are stolen are doing the scam but they are 99.99999 % NOT the ones doing the scams. In all the shows I've watched on this and I have seen many over the years...even old ones on Dr Phil etc... it's only ever been the person in the photo and a person in the USA ONE TIME and every other time it has been someone in Nigeria or Ghana that stole someone's photos. Some of them even pretend to be a celebrity and fool a fan which is really fucking stupid to fall for.

I realised someone even tried that on me once. And they thought I was just some dumb fan of a celebrity and tried to pretend to me that they were that celebrity. But actually the reason I had that celebrity on my profile and stuff was because I wrote a whole fucking 75,000 word book on the celebrity. And they were trying to pretend to be the celebrity and getting stuff about him wrong and it was so stupid. Hahaha. And they sent me a photo of a red safe and told me that there were gold bars in the safe that they wanted to send to me. And I was laughing and I said "What is a photo of a safe supposed to prove. I can't see gold bars inside of it."?

I didn't tease the wannabe scammer much though because you never know how big of a psycho someone online actually is- so leading them on and messing with them might not be worth it.

Damn, this reminds me that unfortunately I've seen news like this before, but if I remember correctly, there was a time when it was kind of "trendy," so to speak, for scammers to be from India or the Middle East, pretending to be Arab princes or celebrities like Brad Pitt.

The Pact - March 19, 2026, 12:03 am

(Mar 18, 2026 11:56 PM)TheNaturalBoy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Damn, this reminds me that unfortunately I've seen news like this before, but if I remember correctly, there was a time when it was kind of "trendy," so to speak, for scammers to be from India or the Middle East, pretending to be Arab princes or celebrities like Brad Pitt.

Mostly what I've seen on YouTube channels and such regarding scammers, scams on the elderly involving gift cards and pretending the elderly owe money on their credit cards...these seem to come out of India and the romance scams and the email prince that needs help are mostly from Nigeria and occasionally Ghana and I've read also Malaysia....but I've never watched any shows where the scammer turned out to be in Malaysia.

I just occasionally watch this kind of content. But before there were vigilante YouTubers catching scammers for CONTENT...there were the family members of victims of romance scams turning to Dr Phil.