Literally the only game I have time to personally play outside of administration for pserver; anyone keen to play? TBC classic is dropping soon too.

Hope you are doing well Tyr. I used to play Classic Hardcore, ran it up a bit and sold some early chars then quit. It's a super fun game though.

Super fun indeed. They are allowing people @ max level to xfer for (ofc) $. Sometimes it feels like the real game is a private server now. Anyhow, good to see you around . :)

You could always jump ship and make the swap over to OSRS ?

Talk about another game that will take up any of your free time when you're really into it ?

I hate to gravedig this like a month later but literally think this is the most time consuming game ever created intended to split not only partner from partner but soul from body. I see why I went to pservers even before I understood anything about the backend of them as a child because the grind isn't meant for everyone.

I would've spent prob all of this month and the next just getting the materials I needed in order to save 200g on a mount and I wasn't having that so I just bought the regular racial one; unfortunately I am a blood elf so I have a gay ass chicken to ride and not a badass demon horse but whoever in the world has time for this grind needs to get outside more.

Then you gotta be attuned to every god damn dungeon and raid after you hit 70 which requires re-running them over and over doing the H mode. The dumb thing right now is the community full of sweaty tryhards who got to 70 within a week of the game opening, have already cleared all of phase 1 content in Karazhan (shit when I first started playing this game as a child guilds were stuck there for months)

I'm cool as long as I have time to do BT and stuff but the difference between people who are "semi" hardcore and full on hardcore is staggering and I only notice it in the PvE population. The PvP'rs are usually silent, never whine, and more likely to fuck you up in the actual game instead of just topping meters.

I have yet to find a single TBC pserver I am content with so I almost feel like getting back into development again like I once was. Yet Nostalrius had that sh*t running tight until the lawsuits.

Idk man regarding RS one of these nights don't be surprised if I convo you and I'm like "alright let's get it."
