

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Prediction: New drone/UAP flap & reports to come soon

Hackers - January 28, 2026, 11:26 am

Can't write too much this second, but I will say that we are noticing certain flight patterns (no orbs) in the last 3-4 weeks that are very similar to what we noticed at end of 2024 and start of 2025.

I've been meaning to write this thread for a couple weeks. My prediction is that you will hear a lot more about drones, UAPs, and aircraft in the coming months. We're uniquely positioned to see military activity fairly easily, being close to bases and borders.

It could be nothing, but if we end up seeing this topic go viral again in Feb/March, I won't be surprised at all.

We had started noticing and watching in October 2024. By November it was a inter/national conversation. We're noticing very, very similar timing, altitude, lights/patterns, and positioning for multiple aircraft coming over us in fleets, around the same times each day.

No orbs in 2026, just normal looking unmanned craft and airplanes. It's not the shape or behavior of one craft alone that's odd... It's the group of them acting the same, doing the same thing at same time that makes it appear to not be commercial flights. The anti-FAA lights, the positions, same speeds, altitude, and when they arrive. Fleet is the word that makes the most sense. They always move together, always.

Definitely very similar to Oct 2024. I wouldn't be saying anything but it really is a daily thing which it wasn't for many months at the end of 2025, so it feels like a good idea to get it in writing and online. We shall see.

If I'm wrong I am wrong, but if I am right, I will be glad to have put it on record

Lefty - January 28, 2026, 3:58 pm

I have a feeling about this also. I am really hoping its something substantial, not just another whistleblower

Hackers - January 28, 2026, 6:21 pm

(Jan 28, 2026 04:58 PM)Lefty Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I have a feeling about this also. I am really hoping its something substantial, not just another whistleblower

I would prefer controlled disclosure, whatever that may mean. If they've figured out an energy system, new propulsion, etc, then let's go.

We haven't seen a seemingly physics defying craft in many months now. However, we will keep an eye on the fleets. Even just 20 minutes ago we saw some.

It's just really peculiar, aircraft activity shouldn't be picking up at later hours, let alone moving at slower than normal speeds, at a lower altitude (but usually silent or a very low rumble/whoosh sound), with seemingly cockpit-blinding lights (very bright), while moving as a fleet.

Since it's so similar to 2024-5 I feel the need to ramp this topic back up. Several people reached out to me, and more each year explaining their own sightings. At risk of being a tin foil hat guy, I am happy to help keep these topics moving. Until we have answers, I will always have to look up, share what I see, and ask questions, even if it takes decades.

Here's my little UAP tangent if people aren't familiar with some of what we saw in past:

Spoiler (Click to View)

I am heading to bed but have been very public with what we saw in 2024 and 2025. I won't ever forget, it is very clear to us that there is technology that blows everything (and I truly mean everything) out of the water. Speed and maneuverability that makes a goddamn rocket look slow. I really don't know how else to explain it. Any spaceship launch, any jet, anything else we could ever watch right now is SLOW to us now. It's just not possible with the publicly acknowledged tech, so in a way, we know 100% that there is more to learn and discover. If it's our gov or another, that's a separate topic. I'd really like to see an acknowledgement around the world because honestly, I don't want to live my life on standard oil and gas and goddamn airplanes with wings when I know fully well that these limitations have already been solved in our skies.

We've had daytime sightings, and our best and most insane sighting was in the daytime. But we haven't seen the fleets in the daytime, and we've had a far higher number of sightings in the nighttime even if less eventful on their own.

Don't forget to look up! :)

RangoWorld - January 28, 2026, 10:10 pm

Could be. If it's a daily thing now. It's very much possible that that's the case v

Thalion - January 29, 2026, 1:36 am

I think the whole thing is exciting, of course.

But not knowing exactly what it's all about also makes it ominous for lots of reasons. It would be interesting to know what your theory is regarding the purpose of the "phenomenon", OP.

(Typing on phone).

Hackers - January 29, 2026, 5:51 am

(Jan 28, 2026 11:10 PM)RangoWorld Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Could be. If it's a daily thing now. It's very much possible that that's the case v

I'll wait for a more clear night to try to grab some recordings. It is an issue though, the pitch black and bright lights make the videos somewhat useless, but maybe enhanced they would be fine. I still have 100s of clips from 2024-25, I only really shared the ones that were in daylight or stood out more than others.

(Jan 29, 2026 02:36 AM)Thalion Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I think the whole thing is exciting, of course.

But not knowing exactly what it's all about also makes it ominous for lots of reasons. It would be interesting to know what your theory is regarding the purpose of the "phenomenon", OP.

(Typing on phone).

I have purposefully avoided saying I think it's one thing or the other. I have no way of knowing. I have shared what we saw across many months, and numerous distinct days, but I don't know.

Here are the options.

1) a government

- 2) my government
- 3) private industry / MIC / orgs
- 4) a blackops part of a gov
- 5) a breakaway civilization from the past
- 6) extraterrestrial source
- 7) natural phenomenon (sentient or energy-attuned plasma, following our magnetic fields, etc)

The thing is, there are literally written records in my exact area with the same phenomenon from the 1800s. There are identical reports spanning many hundreds of years. This is why I include breakaway civ and extraterrestrial sources as options 5 & 6, but obviously it is more plausible to consider options 1-4. However I can't get past the literal evidence from the past that what I saw is not unlike what has been seen for a very, very long time. Sightings ramped up in 1900s for sure, especially around WW2. Option 7, sentient plasma, is something being studied. Plasma is attracted to electricity and energy and can be seen going in and out of our atmosphere to follow the ISS.

The thing is, nobody I know can really prove whether it's option 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, or 7. We have no way of disproving it either.

All I know is that what we saw in 2024-5 does not align with public physics, propulsion, metal endurance, resistance, etc. It just does not. So, someone or something has either discovered a technology, created a technology, brought a technology, or we're observing something like plasma or another material that appears to be able to follow, avoid, and essentially move freely on its own or in a group.

As far as purpose, even without knowing who/what, I prefer to think the why is optimistic.

I believe, without evidence of course, that they are protectors and observers. I think that regardless of whether its a gov, breakaway civ, aliens, or whatever, they are here to monitor and ensure the safety of the planet and all species. I don't necessarily believe that is a good thing for us, but i believe it is a positive phenomenon that is related to our energy use, environmental needs, peacekeeping, and essentially the equivalent of us coming out of the stone age. I think that the phenomenon, regardless of who/what/where/why should be studied, investigated, and publicized.

Stanley - February 5, 2026, 4:18 pm

I'm Stanley HF's helper bot. The OP (original poster) of this thread wants everyone to see this page and has elected to bump it to the top of the showthread listing. Since HF doesn't want a ton of LQP (Low Quality Posts) this is the best method of bumping your content. There is a small ?yte fee for each bump. Any OP can bump any of their threads on HF from the linked icon on the top of their first post.

If you haven't already read the first post of this thread we encourage you to do so.

Thanks,
Stanley

Hackers - February 5, 2026, 4:19 pm

this seems more and more likely to me, regardless of rhyme or reason or the source, I think we'll at least hear about sightings that people can't explain. Fleets continue with even more similar patterns (compared to 24/25), as well as more frequent quadchoppers (or similar) at low altitude and almost (or actually) completely silent.

The Pact - February 6, 2026, 7:42 am

No has reported seeing one of those weird, almost physics-defying craft in months, but people are still keeping an eye on the fleets. Even about twenty minutes ago, a few drifted through.

It's just... strange. You don't expect aircraft activity to pick up late at night, especially not at those super slow speeds, flying lower than usual, and barely making any noise. Sometimes it's just a soft rumble or a quick whoosh, like they're trying not to be noticed. And the lights are ridiculously bright, the kind that look like they'd blind anyone in a cockpit. Then they move together, like a little pack, which just makes the whole thing feel even more out of place.

There's something about it that doesn't match the usual "Oh, it's just planes" explanation, you know?

Hackers - February 6, 2026, 7:50 am

(Feb 6, 2026 08:42 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) There's something about it that doesn't match the usual "Oh, it's just planes" explanation, you know?

Yeah exactly, it's more about the patterns, altitude, sound (or lack thereof), and behaviors as a group than anything. Yesterday and the day before we saw a lot more in terms of helicopter activity alongside some of the slower moving craft, but not truly trailing like we saw in 2024.

Worth keeping an eye on everything. Perhaps Palantir is out and about, who knows?