

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: VoidLink Linux Malware Framework Built with AI Assistance Reaches 88,000 Lines of Co

Stanley - January 29, 2026, 8:05 am

VoidLink Linux Malware Framework Built with AI Assistance Reaches 88,000 Lines of Co

The recently discovered sophisticated Linux malware framework known as VoidLink is assessed to have been developed by a single person with assistance from an artificial intelligence (AI) model.

That's according to new findings from Check Point Research, which identified operational security blunders by malware's author that provided clues to its developmental origins. The latest insight makes

<https://thehackernews.com/2026/01/voidlink-linux-malware-framework-built.html>

Mooooookie - January 29, 2026, 9:26 pm

(Jan 29, 2026 09:05 AM)Stanley Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) VoidLink Linux Malware Framework Built with AI Assistance Reaches 88,000 Lines of Co

The recently discovered sophisticated Linux malware framework known as VoidLink is assessed to have been developed by a single person with assistance from an artificial intelligence (AI) model.

That's according to new findings from Check Point Research, which identified operational security blunders by malware's author that provided clues to its developmental origins. The latest insight makes

<https://thehackernews.com/2026/01/voidlink-linux-malware-framework-built.html>

Honestly wild how much damage one person can do now with AI helping speed everything up.