Thread: Why did Epstein hang himself? \(answer inside\)

Hackers - January 30, 2026, 7:49 pm

Because he had to hear about food

The backstory is that he did indeed listen to food, from Sultan Ahmed bin Sulayem (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sultan_Ahmed_bin_Sulayem) - chairman and CEO of DP World and the chairman of the Ports, Customs & Free Zone Corporation.

and they just kept cooking!

Now you know!

There's a reason this thread is in the lounge

If you want the real tea, look into Sberbank, Capital Group, the pageant in 2013, the tower in 2015, and more about Sultan, Sater, and a few others :)

The title of the thread is a real "neck breaker" lol.

It is fascinating how they documented all sorts of stuff outside the sexual activities, like cooking.

yeah the files have a lot of info in them. It's good because it easily shows how friendly everyone was, how close they were, and how often they would chat & meet in person too.

It's hard to say "that's just a fake allegation, we weren't friends" when there are records of people emailing back & forth across many years

Give us the highlights Nodes. But I honestly don't even know what any of what you posted in the OP means?

Other than I know some other countries think sandwiches are pretty disgusting. I had Chinese people ask me what do white people eat for lunch if they don't eat rice and when I said sandwiches they all nodded and said yes but they all looked disgusted like they were thinking. ?

And they're right compared to rice dishes.

Rsynced - February 1, 2026, 8:28 pm

Man this never gets old, how do you come up with this stuff? IDK man.... Isn't he the guy who got all that jail bait pussy? lol lame973 - February 3, 2026, 1:33 pm

I don't think he did. It's all fake and scripted

User name checks out! I thought I was in the Food and Cooking section for a while here and still not sure what is happening in this thread.

Should I move it to food? ?

Silliness aside though, raping and sex trafficking teenage girls has nothing to do with politics. And anyone that tries to make it about Democrats vs Republicans or race or religion is being an asshole. Pedos and rapists come from all walks of life.

Pretty sure he is alive.

It's pretty hard for someone to turn around later and say, "That allegation is fake, we weren't even friends," when there are years' worth of emails going back and forth. The paper trail speaks for itself.

I really like the Sasha/Sascha Riley allegations because within his testimony, he admits to killing a girl in a mercy-killing (Sarah) with another girl, Samantha, who had apparently handled mercy killings in the past too.

He also implicates his own family, so that's another sign that this is not just your run of the mill fake accusation.

He goes as far as saying he stuck a tent pole in Trump's asshole, kicked it in, ruined his colon, and that he had to be medically evacuated.

This is just one of the topics I'd love to discuss in the future, but for the sake of not having to deal with the responses here on HF, I have stuck strictly to anyone-but-Trump in my Epstein posts so far.

When I have time I want to put together the Riley files for you all, as well as the Kenneth Darrel Turner timeline.

Sorry, what? What is political about this thread exactly?

It's two people from two different countries, so inherently two different political systems, who are discussing cooking and the pains of listening to them talk about cooking... with a joke about suicide.

I truly do not understand why so many people call things political when they are not.

You can't even mention a politician without someone claiming it's politics.

For example, Trump likes golf. That's not a political opinion or statement, it's an objective fact that he has stated he likes golf.

Similarly, pointing out the tens and tens of millions of dollars spent on event coordinating and security so that Trump can golf is also not political, it's just a fact.

I encourage you and others to pick up a dictionary.

But you do know the real reason people are claiming it's political though. And that's more embarrassing than anything else. Also you did mention a pageant.

Sorry, what? What is the real reason people call a non-political thread "political" ? Please do tell... If not a misunderstanding of the English language and the definitions of words, what else could explain their incorrect accusation?

And what does someone going to a pageant have to do with politics? It doesn't.

How are you a moderator if you can't define the difference between politics and non-politics?

POLITICS:

Quote:the activities associated with the governance of a country or other area, especially the debate or conflict among individuals or parties having or hoping to achieve power.

Trump has orange hair. Non-political.

Trump wears make-up like a trans person. Non-political.

Trump wears lifts to be taller, like a girl. Non-political.

Trump's name is in the Epstein files over 5,000 times, let alone the redacted parts. Non-political.

Trump was convicted 34x of felonies. Non-political.

Trump's policies are retarded. THAT'S political.

See the difference? Merely discussing real life events involving a politician doesn't make something political. Talking about politics is what makes something political.

There is speculation that Donald Trump shits himself. That is also a NON-POLITICAL STATEMENT.

Some of these people have nodes derangement syndrome or something. You're mostly okay Pact, but some of these weirdos that scream about everything being political sound like actual dumbies.

I didn't write the dictionary or thesaurus, but I feel the need to defend the English language, just like you.

definitions are more important than capitalization

for sure

Also Epstein deserved to be hung because he did not use capitalisation [British spelling] in his email.

Uh Nodes didn't post emails Epstein sent talking shit about Trump he posted an email Epstein sent talking shit about Sultan Ahmed bin Sulayem.

This makes sense, and I appreciate your response. Please notice my use of the comma before 'and'. I will try to be better about capitalising.

Thanks for pointing that out for who the email is about.

This thread was really intended to be a quick laugh because of the reference in the old email.

This thread was really intended to be a quick laugh because of the reference in the old email. I know that's why a number of posts in this thread were kind of crazy. And not trying to dump on LowKey but reading the title it wasn't disguised as a cooking thread at all. ? There was just one photo of Epstein looking like this rich businessman I am not going to ignore because he's a rich client, but he loves to bore me by talking about cooking and wants to cook in front of me, but that food looks gross.

It's okay, it's par for the course and I expect it from certain users. I appreciate the practice in discourse and debate, so at least there's one positive to draw from all of this.

The biggest thing the Epstein files revealed to me, besides the crimes and relationships between leaders, is that even the world's leaders & billionaires talk like normal people. The texts and emails are casual, and on several occasions it seems like they are just like us, sharing news headlines and memes.

It actually led to me taking more risks and since the Epstein files have come out, I've had way more zoom/gmeet calls with CEOs, politicians, and more because the Epstein files made me realize how many people are just putting on a show for the camera, but are otherwise conversing in very casual terms. It gave me the confidence I needed to stop stressing over intro emails and just reach out. It ultimately helped me shift to a more casual tone and this has led to more actual meetings.

Ironically, the Epstein files helped my career because of that... Weird to say, but true. I didn't realize how bad some of these people could be at spelling, punctuation, capitalisation, etc...

I knew a bit about this because for years I have said that people really don't understand how many billion dollar companies are held together by a few overworked people and a consulting company... I've worked with a few top brands internationally and people really would be surprised... some are public stocks too.
