Title: What's one habit you're trying to fix this year?

Could be tech-related or personal, big or small.

Maybe it's procrastination, bad sleep, lack of focus, unfinished projects, or even spending too much time online. Have you actually made progress on it yet, or are you still in the "thinking about fixing it" phase?

Dude, stop with the random AI dumps. You will get yourself blocked.

Take your head out of the AI hole and think as a human.

the Title: tag is a little weird, but what else proves this is AI? It's not an overly technical thread, it's not written as an essay, they aren't using big words or complex grammar, etc.

This reads like a pretty standard thread, not sure what is triggering your AI alarm bells but I am assuming they must have used AI elsewhere for you to say it

A couple of points...

1. He made 11 threads in 10 minutes, 4 of them have "Title:" in the title..

2. In AI texts I always see these quotes "" instead of normal "" and always the quote ' instead of ' . It might be a keyboard thing but chatgpt is always using these.

lol then yeah, there you go, thanks for replying. That makes a lot more sense now be more HQ OP, 11 threads in 10 minutes starting with title: formatting is a red flag for sure.

I'm going to hold off on negging though, at least he is starting discussions. I'll take this over 13,000 word essays being posted as tutorials with 17 different fucking headlines.

This was the first somewhat normal post from this member that I've seen. But yeah the thread tag was weird, but the other posts I've seen from him were all paranoia about hacking at work and about his friends. I don't think they were AI made unless he asked the AI to make a bunch of posts that looked like paranoid psychosis.

Procrastination and masturbation, making progress with the two.
