Thread: What Happened to all the Minecraft Clients?

Saterax - February 11, 2026, 12:35 pm

Been so long since I was screwing around with Minecraft clients and was checking out some sites, just registered on here and wanted to ask, and it seems like so many of the Java ones are gone, outdated, or just somewhat mid.

What is the current source to get the clients at this point? Or is it going to end up being a Discord server of some sort haha.

I loved playing Factions and using ESP to find the hidden underground bases. I'd tunnel in, then do something dumb like fill their area with spiderwebs or mix their storage containers around. Y'know, annoying rather than malicious. Fun times though~

To be fair, I might also just be dumb and not able to find something that is obvious. Been a minute, so-

Yeah, the scene isn't like it used to be. A lot of the old Java client sites are either dead or just outdated now.

Most of the activity moved to Discord communities from what I've seen. Public websites aren't really the main thing anymore.

Beautiful. Appreciate the thread. Crazy how limited the 'scene' is now. I remember it being so easy to find entire sites dedicated to people showing off their clients.

Yes, it got like that, I think everyone who was in dev that decided to continue all went into the same project on GitHub.

Feel free to reply to my thread to get it active again. Thanks
