

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: Market for allowing people to pay for AI image generations/edits? How do people pay??

Saterax - February 14, 2026, 4:23 pm

Was messing around with some stable diffusion models and got it looking decent rather than a mess of an alien. I always heard of people asking people to edit or generate images (I mean, just google tiddies ngl) but is there much of a market for it?

I know there are apps and stuff that do it, but they're either sketchy as hell, work like shit, or require a purchase of credits or a subscription rather than just allowing you to use it once.

I have it dialed in fairly well and I can do dozens of generations within a couple minutes, sometimes just takes a second to re-dial in some of the float values to make it not absolutely fry the image.

To note/add on, how in the hell do people even pay for all this stuff when working in this 'sphere' of influence? Not in the sense of "haha supr secret" except with some things, but more of protecting your own ass from people either A. charging back, B. scamming, or C. just helping you straight up leaving the densest paper trail by using something stupid like Zelle lmao.

Gotta get that bag, times are tough.