

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Ubisoft CEO Responds To Nepotism Accusations After He Appoints Son A Top Boss

Stanley - February 20, 2026, 9:55 pm

Ubisoft CEO Responds To Nepotism Accusations After He Appoints Son A Top Boss

Ubisoft has been a family business since its origination, and that trend continued with the naming of CEO Yves Guillemot's son, Charlie Guillemot, the co-head of the newly formed, Tencent-backed Vantage Studios division of the French gaming giant. Charlie already pushed back against nepotism accusations, and now his father has reacted to the concerns as well. Speaking to Variety, the elder Guillemot said Ubisoft was "created as a family company" and it is this family-oriented structure that he believes is essential to the company today and into the future. "This perspective guides our decisions and helps us build franchises, teams, and strategies that endure for decades," he said. Continue Reading at GameSpot

<https://www.gamespot.com/articles/ubisoft-ceo-responds-to-nepotism-accusations-after-he-appoints-son-a-top-boss/1100-6538321/?ftag=CAD-01-10abi2f>

RangoWorld - February 21, 2026, 1:00 am

Family Dynasty is now in videogames companies huh?

In my view the nepotism chants can never be countered. The only way for it to go sway is to let the person work somewhere else other than his dad's company or party.

Aeowulf - February 21, 2026, 5:10 am

Ubisoft is one of the worst video game companies and this just continues to add to their fked up legacy.