Marathon Is Already Shooting Up Steam's Top-Sellers Chart

The official release of Marathon is still a week away, but the open-beta Server Slam event is getting underway today. And if the early response on Steam is any indication, Bungie's new extraction shooter won't go the way of Concord. Marathon is currently No. 3 on Steam's list of the best-selling games. Only Resident Evil Requiem and Counter-Strike 2 are ahead of it at No. 1 and No. 2, respectively. Requiem is out tomorrow, so its success isn't unexpected. Considering the competition, Marathon is doing very well so far, and it's two slots ahead of Arc Raiders, which is currently at No. 5. The Server Slam event is designed to see how well Marathon's infrastructure can handle the influx of players ahead of the game's launch. The Server Slam hasn't been live for long, but it's already over 100k concurrent players, making it bigger than all but seven games at the time of this writing. Continue Reading at GameSpot

Never heard of this game... clicks though, "Oh, yeah, that's why."

Another game I won't care about. Good for them though.
