Thread: Can someone link basic cyber security guide?

aerozprit - March 4, 2026, 4:21 am

Hello,

I'm not sure is the lounge a right place for this post, but move or delete this if it's not.

So I'm into cyber security and I know that HF has awesome guides. I'm here to look a guide for basic stuff about improving own cyber security after that my plan is to move forward to learn more about it. Because the global situation is what it is, I think that improving all aspects of IT is good. And I want to start with the security of my own devices.

I already have a little bit of a knowledge about Python, C#, Debian based Linux distros and how what basic IT terms mean. I learn fast and I'm also ready to connect with others on the forum and talk more about the subject. But also I like to talk about politics, economics, history and different kind of theories about the world.

Trust the process is my motto for learning.

Thank you everybody already

xoxo

Can you suggest some courses that help improving IT skills?

I have thought that I should make few to get some certifies.
