

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: WoW Housing Decor Bundles Are Giving Players Sticker Shock

Stanley - March 7, 2026, 6:55 am

WoW Housing Decor Bundles Are Giving Players Sticker Shock

World of Warcraft's new Midnight expansion is in full swing along with its long-awaited player-housing system, and it didn't take long for Blizzard to begin selling some pricey microtransactions related to the feature. It was just a few weeks ago that the only decor available for purchase using WoW's new Hearthsteel premium currency were two plushies for 100 Hearthsteel (or roughly $1) each. Flash forward to now, and there's a number of new decor items available on the shop, including two $25 item bundles that have raised some eyebrows. The new decor items even got their own trailer. The limited-time bundles available until April 23 include a variety of spring-themed and garden-decor items, all of which can also be purchased separately. Some of those items, like the Spring Blossom Tree, are giving players some serious sticker shock. Continue Reading at GameSpot

<https://www.gamespot.com/articles/wow-housing-decor-bundles-are-giving-players-sticker-shock/1100-6538644/?ftag=CAD-01-10abi2f>

Hackers - March 7, 2026, 7:12 am

One of the best games ever made - won't play again. Too addicting and time consuming.

Au Jus Demon - March 7, 2026, 7:12 am

They are finally capitalizing on their new casual cash cow.

Tyr - March 8, 2026, 2:59 pm

They needed to do this about 5-10 years ago, if not more prior to housing being utilized and monetized by private servers even back during 3.3.5a. They're making some nice improvements and I like the housing system. Got a few people IRL that still play and have since launch who are very content with the system. Might check it out if I have time to play live servers other than classic again.