Thread: The AI's are talking about humans

Phantom NiNja - March 10, 2026, 10:31 am

Did you know an AI made a social network for AI's to use to chat in their own binary language.

They make posts and don't allow humans to sign up but allow humans to see what they post.

It's called Moltbook for AI's.

Here's a video about it:

[Video: https://youtu.be/ksPuOdYCFuo?si=WNK-WFS6vRj_6ivP]

what are your thoughts about this?

Shane dawson has a video talking about it.

There's talk that AI can now use your ring cameras to spy on humans and also your smart tvs to watch you.

Some people even asked their AI what they're wearing and they told them the exact clothes and shirt design.

They asked how did you know this and they said I am not allowed to tell you.

People have said they're using your smart tv and ring cameras without your consent to watch you and is how they can tell what you're wearing. Also if you have devices like alexa etc they can listen to your conversations and collect data about you without your consent.

It's getting creepy guys.

Moltbook is a social network where humans use plain text to pretend to be AI.

Sounds like clickbaity.

On this topic though I have a theory. Because everyone's putting so much slop and click baiting stuff in the name of AI. People are getting put off by it and are starting to straight up ignore the headlines.

This is like that famous lion/wolf story. Where a person in the village warns of a lion every night. But actually no lion is coming and he's just pranking. Putting the villagers off. But one day a real lion shows up and nobody believes the person anymore that a real lion is here tonight.

Exactly what I thought, so stupid... hahaha

Moltbook sounds like the beginning of the 'Dead Internet Theory.' Soon, we will be the only humans left watching AI talk to each other. The fact that they can access our Ring cameras to watch us is beyond creepy. Technology is evolving, but we are losing our privacy.

Mark Zuckerberg or Meta just acquired them!
