Coruna iOS Exploit Kit Uses 23 Exploits Across Five Chains Targeting iOS 13–17.2.1

Google said it identified a "new and powerful" exploit kit dubbed Coruna (aka CryptoWaters) targeting Apple iPhone models running iOS versions between 13.0 and 17.2.1.

The exploit kit featured five full iOS exploit chains and a total of 23 exploits, Google Threat Intelligence Group (GTIG) said. It's not effective against the latest version of iOS. The findings were first reported by WIRED.

This shows iPhones are not immune to serious attacks. Coruna used a large set of exploits to target older iOS versions, but Google said it does not work on the latest iOS, so updating your iPhone is the main protection. It's a good reminder to keep devices fully patched and avoid risky links or websites.
