

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Ban Ewhoring Ebooks & Marketplace Activity

Hackers - March 13, 2026, 10:23 am

I would like to suggest that we ban ewhore activity on the forums. I think it deters certain people from the site, and it could be illegal in some areas, and is unethical because by the very nature of the scheme... it's a method to scam people. AI generated deepfakes and identity theft are also a very real concern and govs will likely continue to crackdown on that.

Under existing rules, perhaps ewhoring is already banned if it's considered to be a form of identity & financial fraud. The legal definitions for fraud would most likely treat ewhoring as fraud because it involves asking for money under a false identity, to deliver something that's not truly real.

Skorp - March 13, 2026, 11:43 am

Ewhoring is dying slowly already as it is due to AI now. It's a grey area with me. I don't see it being banned though.

Omniscient already changed the forum name to Adult Content Management.

Hackers - March 13, 2026, 11:45 am

(Mar 13, 2026 11:43 AM)Skorp Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Ewhoring is dying slowly already as it is due to AI now. It's a grey area with me. I don't see it being banned though.

Omniscient already changed the forum name to Adult Content Management.

I think AI adult content could be interesting, but would like to see the sale of adult content as a banned marketplace topic in the future. Let people figure out how far they can push AI, but without it being a whole section designed for tricking guys, monetizing fake profiles, and selling ebooks about it all - imho.

I'm not against porn or AI nudity, I just don't think ewhoring / adult content management is a respectable way to make money.

SIM-2502833 - March 13, 2026, 1:28 pm

It's literally indian phone scammer tier shit just even worse because you're wrecking the person's emotions at the same time.

Hackers - March 13, 2026, 3:02 pm

(Mar 13, 2026 01:28 PM)SIM-2502833 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It's literally indian phone scammer tier shit just even worse because you're wrecking the person's emotions at the same time.

Yeah, true, true. Emotional damage....

B3A - March 13, 2026, 4:01 pm

Meh, not a fan, not against, idc for these people, they see old peoples weewees for few bucks.

Nachfolger - March 13, 2026, 4:27 pm

I'm pretty sure hacking would be against some religions as well, I propose we ban that too.

Hackers - March 13, 2026, 4:57 pm

(Mar 13, 2026 04:27 PM)Nachfolger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm pretty sure hacking would be against some religions as well, I propose we ban that too.

And when someone pretends to be a hacker and sells a fake hack, we call that a scam.

I'm going to remove the religious comment though. In hindsight, it probably doesn't matter for that aspect.

ProxyLand - March 13, 2026, 8:55 pm

(Mar 13, 2026 04:57 PM)Hackers Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) And when someone pretends to be a hacker and sells a fake hack, we call that a scam.

I'm going to remove the religious comment though. In hindsight, it probably doesn't matter for that aspect.

Idk, What if the hacker sells a real hack? Do we also propose a ban?

Null State - March 14, 2026, 12:34 am

(Mar 13, 2026 04:57 PM)Hackers Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) And when someone pretends to be a hacker and sells a fake hack, we call that a scam.

I'm going to remove the religious comment though. In hindsight, it probably doesn't matter for that aspect.

While I get your point with the thread, I feel like it's a slippery slope. Server stress testing was allowed for a long time, even though we all knew it wasn't testing shit, it was just people knocking off sites and random kids on Xbox Live and PSN. Omni only made the change when idiots drew too much law enforcement attention. Same for quite a bit of things here. RATs are sold, as well as crypters, and yes they're technically not illegal because they have legitimate uses by all means, but let's be honest, no one here is buying a RAT and crypting their shit to actually remote admin anything they're supposed to be touching. Yet they're still allowed, why? It's a hacking forum. Same goes for a lot of the streaming service accounts here, you think all of that is actually obtained legitimately? 99% of it isn't. I could go on and on, but realistically if you're wanting the site to be wholesome, Omni should just wipe the server and retire.

Edit: Would also like to add, while I've never participated in E-whoring myself, is it really scamming? You're selling pics of some naked chick. They're getting what they pay for, and no one here is being scammed, random people online are. Onlyfans girls literally breathe down your neck lying about how they want your dick, yet do you ever truly get to give it? No, yet that's somehow only frowned upon if it's something you disagree with as a subject i.e. Porn in general.

MadScientist - March 14, 2026, 1:01 am

(Mar 14, 2026 12:34 AM)Null State Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) While I get your point with the thread, I feel like it's a slippery slope. Server stress testing was allowed for a long time, even though we all knew it wasn't testing shit, it was just people knocking off sites and random kids on Xbox Live and PSN. Omni only made the change when idiots drew too much law enforcement attention. Same for quite a bit of things here. RATs are sold, as well as crypters, and yes they're technically not illegal because they have legitimate uses by all means, but let's be honest, no one here is buying a RAT and crypting their shit to actually remote admin anything they're supposed to be touching. Yet they're still allowed, why? It's a hacking forum. Same goes for a lot of the streaming service accounts here, you think all of that is actually obtained legitimately? 99% of it isn't. I could go on and on, but realistically if you're wanting the site to be wholesome, Omni should just wipe the server and retire.

Edit: Would also like to add, while I've never participated in E-whoring myself, is it really scamming? You're selling pics of some naked chick. They're getting what they pay for, and no one here is being scammed, random people online are. Onlyfans girls literally breathe down your neck lying about how they want your dick, yet do you ever truly get to give it? No, yet that's somehow only frowned upon if it's something you disagree with as a subject i.e. Porn in general.

Yeah its absolutely scamming, they're men pretending to be woman theyre not while social engineering money out of people while also selling nudes of unsuspecting people without their consent or knowledge. It's pretty pathetic really and is totally a form of scamming, and its weird for a man to be sitting behind a computer pretending to be a woman and flirting with other men and sexting them all day. They need to just come out the closet and start selling their own nudes to other men lol...

(Mar 13, 2026 08:55 PM)ProxyLand Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Idk, What if the hacker sells a real hack? Do we also propose a ban?

Depends what the hack is, Ransomware? Yes. Hacks involving Scada? Yes...

(Mar 13, 2026 04:01 PM)B3A Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Meh, not a fan, not against, idc for these people, they see old peoples weewees for few bucks.

Yeah they're on par with Scam call centers scamming people who are naive and not computer savvy of their money, I see them more pathetic on one hand flirting with dudes and getting dick pics all day but feel worse for the elderly getting scam calls and loosing their savings. My ex wives Grandma almost lost her entire life savings (having started poor with absolutely nothing) but she got the routing number off by a number and was saved by a family member the following day. She ended up building 2 beach homes for her daughter and son right on the beach to secure the funds for future generations.

Null State - March 14, 2026, 1:18 am

(Mar 14, 2026 01:01 AM)MadScientist Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah its absolutely scamming, they're men pretending to be woman theyre not while social engineering money out of people while also selling nudes of unsuspecting people without their consent or knowledge. It's pretty pathetic really and is totally a form of scamming, and its weird for a man to be sitting behind a computer pretending to be a woman and flirting with other men and sexting them all day. They need to just come out the closet and start selling their own nudes to other men lol...

Depends what the hack is, Ransomware? Yes. Hacks involving Scada? Yes...

Yeah they're on par with Scam call centers scamming people who are naive and not computer savvy of their money, I see them more pathetic on one hand flirting with dudes and getting dick pics all day but feel worse for the elderly getting scam calls and loosing their savings. My ex wives Grandma almost lost her entire life savings (having started poor with absolutely nothing) but she got the routing number off by a number and was saved by a family member the following day. She ended up building 2 beach homes for her daughter and son right on the beach to secure the funds for future generations.

That's my point though. Where do you draw the line? Selling the streaming accounts sold here is straight up stealing peoples account info, selling it onto others without their knowledge or consent. RATs are sold as well as installs for said RATs, for people to steal bandwidth, crypto, processing power, files (including nudes) as well as looking at webcams connected to their devices all without their knowledge.

Also, to add, literally the service someone paid me Bytes to advertise in my sig could be considered scamming. They have someone inside Meta making cash with them off of unbanning these accounts. What if they actually truly deserved said ban and actually truly hurt/upset real people in receiving said ban? Is that not scamming Meta by selling unban services? You're taking money to do things explicitly banned in their TOS.

MadScientist - March 14, 2026, 1:32 am

(Mar 14, 2026 01:18 AM)Null State Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That's my point though. Where do you draw the line? Selling the streaming accounts sold here is straight up stealing peoples account info, selling it onto others without their knowledge or consent. RATs are sold as well as installs for said RATs, for people to steal bandwidth, crypto, processing power, files (including nudes) as well as looking at webcams connected to their devices all without their knowledge.

Also, to add, literally the service someone paid me Bytes to advertise in my sig could be considered scamming. They have someone inside Meta making cash with them off of unbanning these accounts. What if they actually truly deserved said ban and actually truly hurt/upset real people in receiving said ban? Is that not scamming Meta by selling unban services? You're taking money to do things explicitly banned in their TOS.

Eh I get where you're coming and dont take place in any marketplaces but E-Whoring is just on a whole other level and serves no other purpose besides scamming unaware men by flirting with them as a woman and sending nude/getting dick pics >.>

There's definitely legitimate accounts being sold and red team purposes for tools here with pentesters and people in IT/CyberSec, I've sold my steam account and IGI when I quit gaming and reselling is popular too, but I getcha we know thats not the sole case >.< I support the banning of the E-Whore category in many ways though and it attracts the worse people into the community.

Adult content management however is a valid and profitable industry working with OF girls and similar that need people to manage socials/webpages/content editing and uploads etc

Hackers - March 14, 2026, 6:46 am

(Mar 14, 2026 01:18 AM)Null State Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That's my point though. Where do you draw the line? Selling the streaming accounts sold here is straight up stealing peoples account info, selling it onto others without their knowledge or consent. RATs are sold as well as installs for said RATs, for people to steal bandwidth, crypto, processing power, files (including nudes) as well as looking at webcams connected to their devices all without their knowledge.

Also, to add, literally the service someone paid me Bytes to advertise in my sig could be considered scamming. They have someone inside Meta making cash with them off of unbanning these accounts. What if they actually truly deserved said ban and actually truly hurt/upset real people in receiving said ban? Is that not scamming Meta by selling unban services? You're taking money to do things explicitly banned in their TOS.

People sell whitehat streaming & AI & other accounts all the time though, so you can't say it's always like that. RATs are just remote access tools which can be whitehat too, such as for employee monitoring. Accepting bytes for signature space is user generated content and there are plenty of whitehat advertisements bought for in that system.

You have brought up some bad faith arguments. You are saying that sometimes other things are bad, so we should allow ewhoring - which is always bad.

Unlike account sales, unlike remote access tools, and unlike signature space rentals, e-whoring is always based on the premise of scamming someone else. The other topics you brought up are not always like that. They are not equivalent and this makes your point near irrelevant in my opinion.

But thank you also for sharing your opinion. Technically you made the case that other topics on HF are only partially disturbed by bad activity, whereas e-whoring as a concept is solely based on it. You won't find a whitehat e-whore for example, but you can find a whitehat signature advertising a whitehat RAT or whitehat account sales.

Proof - March 14, 2026, 2:42 pm

(Mar 13, 2026 10:23 AM)Hackers Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I would like to suggest that we ban ewhore activity on the forums. I think it deters certain people from the site, and it could be illegal in some areas, and is unethical because by the very nature of the scheme... it's a method to scam people. AI generated deepfakes and identity theft are also a very real concern and govts will likely continue to crackdown on that.

Under existing rules, perhaps ewhoring is already banned if it's considered to be a form of identity & financial fraud. The legal definitions for fraud would most likely treat ewhoring as fraud because it involves asking for money under a false identity, to deliver something that's not truly real.

What was your old username? I have you on ignore

I agree with this entirely. Get rid of EW and OF management and all related.

(Mar 13, 2026 11:43 AM)Skorp Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Ewhoring is dying slowly already as it is due to AI now. It's a grey area with me. I don't see it being banned though.

Omniscient already changed the forum name to Adult Content Management.

Just fancy word play to dress it up to look less unethical

Null State - March 14, 2026, 3:49 pm

(Mar 14, 2026 06:46 AM)Hackers Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) People sell whitehat streaming & AI & other accounts all the time though, so you can't say it's always like that. RATs are just remote access tools which can be whitehat too, such as for employee monitoring. Accepting bytes for signature space is user generated content and there are plenty of whitehat advertisements bought for in that system.

You have brought up some bad faith arguments. You are saying that sometimes other things are bad, so we should allow ewhoring - which is always bad.

Unlike account sales, unlike remote access tools, and unlike signature space rentals, e-whoring is always based on the premise of scamming someone else. The other topics you brought up are not always like that. They are not equivalent and this makes your point near irrelevant in my opinion.

But thank you also for sharing your opinion. Technically you made the case that other topics on HF are only partially disturbed by bad activity, whereas e-whoring as a concept is solely based on it. You won't find a whitehat e-whore for example, but you can find a whitehat signature advertising a whitehat RAT or whitehat account sales.

You seem to have missed the post I made prior to that one, explaining my reasoning for everything I said.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6309399>

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6296104>

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6318418>

Just three of the threads from the premium tools section, all very plainly stating they have nefarious tools as selling points. There is no legitimate use for a stealer for whitehat, correct? Why do you need to obfuscate, hide from the OS, etc if you're managing these devices in a corporate IT network? Your argument of red teaming is also kind of weak, because let's be honest, corporate red teams aren't looking at HF for tools to use in their profession lol. Don't get me wrong, there are some amazing programmers here, and I'm friends with quite a few, however it just isn't somewhere people are really going to look for tools used in their day to day work. Can you imagine the shit you would get if anything bad came from one of these tools and it was found out you bought it from some random user on HackForums? No one is taking that risk lol. Also, HF is literally laughed at in most circles anymore when it comes to hacking. It's always been full of skids, but it's much less lively with, for lack of a better word, "great" users and has been for a long time.

The signature space selling ALSO wasn't what I said was an issue, I specifically said the advertisement that is currently there, and explained why. It's quite simple, if you were legitimately banned from Instagram for no good reason, wouldn't an appeal result in ban reversal? Obviously if you're paying someone with a man on the inside to do said unban you've likely already been told no from Meta, simple as that.

As for the online accounts, it's not that hard to understand that said methods for getting numerous accounts, especially the huge bulk amount sellers typically have, and at the usually fractional cost amount would be all over the internet and patched as soon as they were found out if they were completely legitimate. Look at viral culture, every glitch/workaround/etc for something everyone wants get posted online at some point, and it ruins it for everyone. Why hasn't that happened for these sellers?

Also, I'm realizing that while typing all that I likely am coming across as a dick, and I am not trying to, I just tend to rant about things sometimes. Apologies if it comes off as rude, am enjoying the discussion on the subjects tbh.

Proof - March 14, 2026, 4:37 pm

(Mar 13, 2026 04:27 PM)Nachfolger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm pretty sure hacking would be against some religions as well, I propose we ban that too.
False

(Mar 14, 2026 01:32 AM)MadScientist Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Eh I get where you're coming and dont take place in any marketplaces but E-Whoring is just on a whole other level and serves no other purpose besides scamming unaware men by flirting with them as a woman and sending nude/getting dick pics >.>

There's definitely legitimate accounts being sold and red team purposes for tools here with pentesters and people in IT/CyberSec, I've sold my steam account and IGI when I quit gaming and reselling is popular too, but I getcha we know thats not the sole case >.< I support the banning of the E-Whore category in many ways though and it attracts the worse people into the community.

Adult content management however is a valid and profitable industry working with OF girls and similar that need people to manage socials/webpages/content editing and uploads etc

I guess you could argue this type of content can originate from revenge porn, or exploitation of women or men If that is what you are into... with that being said, I can further get behind getting rid of this.

Then again, if someone wants to help manage someone's account, who is an actual person-- preferably a female and running an OF then I guess it is hard to draw the line. I'd still rather not see it here, but I don't look in the sections to begin with.

I do get where you are coming from though.

Nachfolger - March 14, 2026, 6:51 pm

(Mar 14, 2026 04:37 PM)Proof Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) False
Informative as always, jew boy.

Proof - March 15, 2026, 5:36 am

(Mar 14, 2026 06:51 PM)Nachfolger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Informative as always, jew boy.

Shalom

CL1B - March 15, 2026, 7:04 am

(Mar 14, 2026 03:49 PM)Null State Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You seem to have missed the post I made prior to that one, explaining my reasoning for everything I said.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6309399>
<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6296104>
<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6318418>

Just three of the threads from the premium tools section, all very plainly stating they have nefarious tools as selling points. There is no legitimate use for a stealer for whitehat, correct? Why do you need to obfuscate, hide from the OS, etc if you're managing these devices in a corporate IT network? Your argument of red teaming is also kind of weak, because let's be honest, corporate red teams aren't looking at HF for tools to use in their profession lol. Don't get me wrong, there are some amazing programmers here, and I'm friends with quite a few, however it just isn't somewhere people are really going to look for tools used in their day to day work. Can you imagine the shit you would get if anything bad came from one of these tools and it was found out you bought it from some random user on HackForums? No one is taking that risk lol. Also, HF is literally laughed at in most circles anymore when it comes to hacking. It's always been full of skids, but it's much less lively with, for lack of a better word, "great" users and has been for a long time.

The signature space selling ALSO wasn't what I said was an issue, I specifically said the advertisement that is currently there, and explained why. It's quite simple, if you were legitimately banned from Instagram for no good reason, wouldn't an appeal result in ban reversal? Obviously if you're paying someone with a man on the inside to do said unban you've likely already been told no from Meta, simple as that.

As for the online accounts, it's not that hard to understand that said methods for getting numerous accounts, especially the huge bulk amount sellers typically have, and at the usually fractional cost amount would be all over the internet and patched as soon as they were found out if they were completely legitimate. Look at viral culture, every glitch/workaround/etc for something everyone wants get posted online at some point, and it ruins it for everyone. Why hasn't that happened for these sellers?

Also, I'm realizing that while typing all that I likely am coming across as a dick, and I am not trying to, I just tend to rant about things sometimes. Apologies if it comes off as rude, am enjoying the discussion on the subjects tbh.

Not a dick, you are as ttbr0 would've said it: Amongst the 1%

It's sad but true and even implying or suggesting changes to steer towards the real hacking scene, where professionalism often relies is not welcomed here. Not by the skids nor HF.

Even terminology used on here is make belief, had to somewhat learn that in reverse ?.

It all comes down to commerce, it has been stated by Omni many times: HF is a business first, community second. Skids sell, which you can greatly profit of. With real malw devs, red teaming and what not this is not so the case, and especially if you're not into hacking (despite the brand name).

Cobalt Strike? Only 1% of the forum has actually operated such frameworks in a context that makes sense. Explaining even the most basics of things will often result in them still failing to understand.

This is how you should look at @ HF, the devs are the fishermen, the skids are the fish.

Same goes for non-software, you see the same ethic; same cycle.

7 - March 15, 2026, 7:08 am

I think ban lifetime... its not clear, my lifetime, yours or the product lifetime

Oh religion should have nothing to do with online profiles nor judged like color.
Belief doesnt make the man, its the man who makes the man

Cooligan - March 15, 2026, 10:06 am

(Mar 13, 2026 11:43 AM)Skorp Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Ewhoring is dying slowly already as it is due to AI now.
It's a grey area with me. I don't see it being banned though.

Omniscient already changed the forum name to Adult Content Management.
This ^

OFM (OnlyFans Management/Manager) is a rapidly growing industry ever since 2020, mainly due to the pandemic that year. It is far different than eWhoring for a multitude of reasons.

I got started in 2020 with OFM and it can be a very lucrative side hustle I'll say that, and it is not eWhoring by any means. The girls are actually real people supplying their own content, no "packs" are ever used—they're always talking to the real girl behind the photos/videos. Very rarely as an OFM do I see any dicks or actual chat logs with customers, I just see invoices and deal with support tickets mainly. That plus the advertising and the girls payments of course—I'm their bank. Also handled by me is the creation of any necessary or required companies for a specific girl, either due to the country she lives in, or other specific region-based restrictions that need bypassing or hurdling.

So all in all, OFM or Adult Content Management, either way you want to call it, is very different than simple eWhoring. OFM requires actual management skill and positive ongoing customer relations, whereas eWhoring is simply just the luck of the draw and hoping you can manipulate someone. Far different than actual customers purchasing your roster of girls content that they've uploaded for that exact reason. No stolen images, no fake girls, resulting in no potential victims either. It's a win-win for everyone who would want to be involved in the adult entertainment industry. That doesn't mean all OFMs are like me though. I'm sure there's plenty of predatory OFMs out there who are solely in it for the quick cash and have zero care for the girls unfortunately. But, that's just how it goes; you have bad eggs in every industry-basket.

(Mar 14, 2026 01:01 AM)MadScientist Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Depends what the hack is, Ransomware? Yes.
Hacks involving Scada? Yes...

Anything SCADA/ICS systems and/or database related will draw lots of attention from law enforcement very quickly.

see: @MLT@