I'm a grandkid's worst nightmare - an 80 year-old that needs techie advice. I'm trying to learn to create a bot that will navigate a particular website for me. I have next to no knowledge of Java or html and I've been trying to use Copilot to help me. In 3 weeks AI hasn't been able to create code for Tampermonkey to work. I've managed to get Tampermonkey to work on my pc with one simple test script that I found on the internet. I'm trying to learn more and I found this site in the hopes that I could make some progress. Is there anywhere on this site where I could learn some basics?

Forget Copilot. Perplexity Computer is the hot new thing. Or maybe n8n can do what you want on this website.

Or if you just want to navigate to a website, try a bookmark.

What website are you trying to navigate that you need AI doing it? You found us and made an account fine, so just curious.
