

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: After Nine Years, The Live-Action Hitman TV Show Is Dead

Stanley - March 17, 2026, 5:55 am

After Nine Years, The Live-Action Hitman TV Show Is Dead

Some nine years ago, it was reported that John Wick creator Derek Kolstad was making a live-action Hitman TV show for Hulu. But now, it's "dead in the water," according to Kolstad himself. He told The Direct that the project--for which he was going to be an executive producer and writer--is no longer going ahead. "It's a little bit of a dagger in the chest. Who knows nowadays, but it's dead in the water. But, man, I love that thing, because I love that game and I love that character," he said. "Nothing's happening with that man, sadly," he added. Continue Reading at GameSpot

<https://www.gamespot.com/articles/after-nine-years-the-live-action-hitman-tv-show-is-dead/1100-6538808/?ftag=CAD-01-10abi2f>

shakur123 - March 18, 2026, 11:15 am

Dead project, not dead IP.

Hitman keeps getting traction, but adaptations keep stalling—hard to translate that slow-burn, player-driven tension to TV.

Another case of strong character, weak execution path.

Charlie Sheen - March 20, 2026, 12:17 am

Could've been a good show if done right.